AGED MAN SLAIN FOR HIS MONEY?

Husbands, Angry at Divorce Revelations,

TO CHALLENGE BONI

Count de Castellane Must Fight Men Who Considered Themselves Injured.

Movement to Have Him Ejected from Clubs Follows Testimony at Trial.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Count Boni de Castellane will have to fight a number of duels, it is declared to-day, as the result of the amazing revelations that have been made at his divorce trial regarding his alleged relations with a number of women.

The city was startled when the fact was made public that Boni had not been married to the Countess, formerly Anna Gould of New York, three months before he attacked her and beat her. To-day it is freely intimated that the husbands of women who have been dragged into this sensational divorce scandal will demand satisfaction from the little Frenchman.

The Count has fought several duels, and his friends declare that he will not attempt to sneak out of the impending encounters, but will grant satisfaction to every one who thinks that he has been injured.

TO FORCE BONI TO RESIGN.

This is not the only punishment which is said to be preparing for Boni. It is intimated that he will be invited to resign from all of his clubs. Radical members of the House of Deputies, it is believed, will also see that things are made so unpleasant for Boni that he is forced to get out.

Boni's negation to the ranks of wife-beaters is a revelation which men and women who have hitherto been his friends will

WILL CLEAN STATE HOUSE OF 'GRAFTERS'—MORAN

WHERE MORAN SPEAKS TONIGHT

SALEM—Skating Rink, at 7:30.
MARBLEHEAD—Abbott's Hall, about 8:15.
GLOUCESTER—City Hall, about 10 or 10:30 o'clock.

John B. Moran, Democratic and Independence League gubernatorial candidate, received the largest and most enthusiastic receptions last night ever accorded a Democratic State candidate in those cities on his whirlwind auto trip through Waltham, North Cambridge, Somerville, Everett and Malden. He talked to over 3,000 people, spoke exactly 182 minutes, and was cheered to the echo at all five rallies.

He openly criticised Governor Guild for not meeting him on the public platform to discuss the thirty-three planks of Democracy. He said Mr. Guild was waiting for instructions from "Boss" Lodge. He told Mr. Guild was not holding off because of dignity, but because he dared not meet him.

Mr. Moran reiterated his accusations against Wilson H. Fairbank, and demanded that Governor Guild remove him from his position on the Jamestown Exposition Commission, and said if Governor Guild would not do this, then he, John B. Moran, when Governor of Massachusetts next January, would perform this duty.

Mr. Moran told the people that he wanted a man for State auditor who could go through all the books for ten years back and detect the many forgeries which he believed to be on file in the State auditor's office. He said he wanted all the State House "grafters" exposed and criminally prosecuted, and that this would be done under the administration of Governor Moran in January.

Defies Doctor's Petition.

A letter, which he said was written by Dr. Robert W. Lovett, of No. 234 Marlboro street, Boston, was taken up and its purposes told to the people by Mr. Moran. Amidst wild cheering Mr. Moran said: "Put it down that on October 16, 1906, Dr. Robert W. Lovett, of No. 234 Marlboro street, Boston, sent printed letters to the doctors of Suffolk county, asking them to support Governor Guild and to oppose Moran. Put it down that I don't care for the doctors and tell them to fight me for all they're worth. I want the vote of the man who, when he detects crime, will report it to the proper authority." (Prolonged applause.) Mr. Moran then charged that it was due to his plank in the Democratic platform for stringent medical regulations that this petition was being sent forth. He said that it already had a large number of signatures and that they came from all over the Commonwealth, but he did not care. He would rather lose votes, he said, than break his promise to the people.

At Somerville the house broke forth with cheers when Mr. Moran approached the press table and with finger pointing directly at the representatives of the Boston newspapers, said: "While District Attorney of Suffolk County I attempted to enforce the poor food law, and I did get some convictions. But because the parties advertised extensively the Boston daily papers refused to print the doings of the criminal court in relation to these criminals.

"Mark it down also that I say they ought to be a law enabling the District Attorney to make every paper print for the benefit of the people, in a column paid for by the government, what great crimes and perjury and poisoned food to the people, and what stores sell pure food to the people." (Breaking applause.)

Mr. Moran said Governor Guild claimed he would not meet him because of his dignity as Governor of Massachusetts. He said that Mr. Guild did not carry this dignity with him, when on the public platform seeking re-election to the highest State office. He said that himself and Mr. Guild were on the platform as private citizens, and that the Governor's talk of dignity was a lame excuse. (Applause.) "He dare not meet me," said Mr. Moran, "if, however, 'Boss Lodge' told him to go ahead and do it, he would meet me." (Applause.) "But 'Boss' Lodge won't tell him to do it, for he knows Mr. Guild can't answer me. If he did meet me on my platform I would compel him to answer to the thirty-three planks in our platform."

TOBIN CHIEF UNTIL ELECTION

President John F. Tobin of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union of America to-day announced that the executive board has instructed him to continue his duties until the special election, December 6, which will be held because of charges of fraud in the regular election.

Friends of Thomas B. Hickey, who claims he was legally elected to the office of general president, declared that he would prefer suit himself at the union's headquarters, No. 246 Summer street, to-day, and demand the books in order to examine charges, but he did not show up.

FALL FROM ROOF KILLS WOMAN

Mrs. Elizabeth O'Neill, fifty years of age, who lived at No. 114 Mercer street, South Boston, was instantly killed by falling from the roof of her home to-day. Mrs. O'Neill had gone up to the roof to do some cleaning. Stepping too near the edge, she tripped and fell to the pavement below.

ELEVATOR DROPS; 3 HURT.

COS COB, Ct., Nov. 1.—A freight elevator carrying six men dropped thirty-five feet yesterday at the new power house of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company. Thomas Murphy, Alfonso Nichols and Joseph Gilbert sustained sprained or broken ankles.

SIR THOMAS FORCES INVITATION TO MAYOR

PLAN TO SNUB FITZGERALD BY ALGONQUIN CLUB STOPPED BY GUEST.

Mayor John F. Fitzgerald will attend the dinner given to-night at the Algonquin Club by the Boston Yacht Club in honor of Sir Thomas Lipton.

The invitation to the Mayor was extended by officers of the club after Sir Thomas last given his ultimatum that he would not attend to-night's dinner unless the Mayor were there, also.

No written invitations to the dinner were sent out. The Yacht Club members simply took food to bring a friend or two. None of the members asked Mayor Fitzgerald to come. Preparations were made for 220 guests to-night, but Mayor Fitzgerald was not among them. The slight which the Mayor's friends say was given him by the Yacht Club intentionally comes as the result of the differences between the Mayor and the club when the yacht of Sir Thomas was first arranged for. When Sir Thomas heard that the Mayor had not been invited to the dinner to-night he was displeased.

"I am in Boston as the Mayor's guest," was the word he sent in substance to the club, "and unless the Mayor is at the dinner I shall not go."

Officers of the club hastily invited the Mayor and he accepted as if nothing had happened, and he will go down officially as coming to the dinner with Sir Thomas.

FIERCE FIRE THREATENS WOODLAND PARK HOTEL

FAMOUS HOSTELRY AT AUBURNDALE BADLY DAMAGED BY FLAMES.

The Woodland Park Hotel at Auburndale is caught fire a few minutes before 1 o'clock this afternoon and will probably be partially if not wholly destroyed.

It is the best known of Boston's suburban hotels and the inn where the Yale football team has stopped when here for its game with Harvard in Boston.

A general alarm brought assistance from the Newton fire department.

A few minutes after the hotel caught fire one end was wholly in flames, and there was danger of its spread.

No one is known to have been hurt in the rush of the occupants to places of safety.

STORM HAVOC ON THE OCEAN

The gale that swept along Cape Cod at a velocity of seventy miles an hour last evening and which prevented boats from leaving this harbor eased up to-day and shipping took on normal conditions.

Off Orleans the steamer Herman Winter, bound from New York to Boston with eighteen men aboard, had a narrow escape from being driven on the rocks. At one time the boat, at the mercy of the waves, was within a length of the danger line, but by masterful seamanship escaped.

The Arthur Lord, which ran ashore at Hyannis yesterday, was in the same position to-day. The captain was trying to arrange for a tug to help him from his perilous position. At Monomoy Point, Captain Kelley reported the gale especially severe. The large power boat of the Consolidated Wool Company of Boston was driven ashore and now lies half full of water in the breakers.

EPIDEMIC WORSE IN WORCESTER

WORCESTER, Nov. 1.—Worcester's diphtheria epidemic is increasing. Since saturday there have been reported four cases, making a total of twenty for the week. It is now prevalent not only in the public schools, but the parochial schools as well.

SAY SIGNALS AGAINST FLYER

Officers of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad are to-day making an investigation to ascertain the cause of the wreck at Sharon Heights last night, when the Federal express crashed into a freight train, seriously injuring John Keeler, engineer of the express. Several trainmen were slightly hurt.

General Manager Higgins is conducting the inquiry at his office. Towerman Rob inson stoutly maintains he set the signals against the express while the freight train was trying to make the siding, and Brakeman James Buckley of the freight says that he flagged the express and that the engineer answered him.

Engineer Keeler is confined in the Massachusetts General Hospital as a result of his being pinned under his engine for two hours where he suffered intense agony.

The road was blocked for two hours, both engines were wrecked, and because they are among the heaviest on the road it was with difficulty that they were raised by wrecking crews.

EXTRA PENN. DIVIDEND.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—The directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad to-day declared a dividend of 3½ per cent., which is 1 per cent. regular and ½ per cent. extra.

Michael Kennedy of South Lincoln Found Dead in Stall of Barn—Police Seek Tramp Seen With Man Short Time Before Body Was Discovered.

Michael Kennedy, a well-to-do farmer of South Lincoln, was found dead in a stall of his barn at Haynes Corners to-day, under such circumstances that the police believe he was beaten to death.

An alarm has been sent out for a tramp who was seen in Kennedy's company a short time before the body was found.

The doors of Kennedy's home were found to be barred with heavy beams on the outside, with the evident intention of preventing egress from the house.

It was at first thought that Kennedy might have been kicked to death by his horse. The animal was found, however, standing harnessed to a light runabout in the yard.

THINK MAN SLAIN FOR MONEY.

Kennedy was known to have a horse of savings banks and to have kept a large sum of money in the house. It is thought that this may have been the cause of the farmer's death.

Mr. Kennedy was eighty years of age.

Anthony Dempsey, a crossing tender, discovered the body. He saw Mr. Kennedy's horse walking about near the house, and, thinking the fact was peculiar, he went to the barn. There he discovered the body of Kennedy lying in the stall.

The old man's head was badly cut. There was also a jagged cut behind the left ear. There was another severe cut on the forehead. To all appearances he had been struck several blows and then dragged into the stall.

CLUE IN AUTOPSY.

Dr. Chamberlain, the medical examiner at Concord, was notified, as was Chief of Police Craig. An autopsy was performed, which is said to have furnished a clue to the cause of the man's death. Dr. Chamberlain, however, refuses to announce his finding.

Chief Craig has detailed several officers, at the request of the Lincoln authorities, to assist him in the investigation of the case. Several suspicious circumstances are being run down by the Concord officers.

A circumstances which tends to further increase the suspicion that Kennedy was murdered is that he went to Boston last Tuesday and went driving home in the evening was in company with a man who last summer worked for one of the farmers in that vicinity.

This man it is known worked around this part of the country all Summer. He had not been seen for some weeks and his being in company with Kennedy was unusual enough to be remarked at the time. Since Tuesday this man has not been seen in the neighborhood.

It has been found that a bunch of keys which Kennedy uniformly carried tied to a leather shoestring which he often had tied around his waist was missing, but the severed shoestring was still in his clothes. A razor was also discovered to have been stolen from the home in which the old man had lived for so long alone.

SAY CAMBRIDGE MAN STARTED $10,000 FIRE

Mecham A. Good was arrested by the Cambridge police to-day, taken before Judge Almy in the Third District Court and charged with arson in causing a $10,000 fire early to-day in Cambridge. He is now held in bonds of $1,000 for hearing on November 8. He was also charged with drunkenness and held in $100. To both charges he pleaded not guilty.

The fire which the police believe he set destroyed the stable owned by Robert Fawcett, in the rear of No. 922 Cambridge street, East Cambridge, and a cooper shop adjoining, owned by Edward A. Bancroft.

Good is the man who gave the alarm. The fire had scarcely a headway when Sergeant Counihan and Patrolman Patten were detailed to probe it. Suspicion attached to Good. He had been under suspicion before and had been hauled before the State Fire Commissioners. The police found him at the corner of Harding and Cambridge streets. His answers to certain questions were not satisfactory, and he was taken to court.

The fire was discovered at 1 o'clock in Fawcett's stable, and when the department arrived had gained such headway that a general alarm was turned in. Fourteen valuable horses were in the stable, and all were saved, a rescuing party composed of Sergeant Dan Counihan and Officers O'Brien, Patten, Lohane, Mulligan and Carney and Councilman James F. Black fighting their way through the flames and bringing the horses from their stalls.

The blaze quickly communicated with the cooper shop and both buildings were totally destroyed. The firemen settlement in that section was threatened, but the firemen succeeded in controlling the flames.

The police believe the fire was the work of a fiend and are working on that theory to-day.

WORKMEN DANCE TO-NIGHT.

The seventh annual ball of Tremont Lodge, No. 124, Ancient Order of United Workmen of Massachusetts, will take place this evening in Oriental Hall, No. 2132 Washington street. There will be a large gathering of the members and their friends is expected to enjoy the occasion. Dancing begins at 8 o'clock.

form. He doesn't know where he stands." (Applause.) "If I had him here and could ask him question, your cheers would make him answer." (Wild applause.)

Turning to the Fairbank matter, "If say Governor Guild," said Mr. Moran, "that you ought to remove that man Fairbank instantly from the commission of the Jamestown exposition. (Applause.) Governor Guild, how long you are going to keep Fairbank on honorable commission to represent this State I want you to take away from him.

I say to you, Governor Guild, if you don't remove Fairbank I hold you are not properly fit to have charge of honorable commission. You are unfit to be Governor. (Applause.) You are unfit to be even a subordinate. You are unfit to receive the vote of honest people. (Wild applause.)

I demand, Governor Guild, that you place yourself right with the people and remove Fairbank. (Tremendous applause.) If you don't say first thing when Governor after January 1 will be to remove Fairbank." (Applause.)

In referring to the working of the lobbyists, Mr. Moran said members of the Legislature went to a hotel and there the lobbyists allowed the legislators to run money at cards and thereby placed the legislators under obligation to the lobbyists. (Applause.)

In discussing the Overtime Bill, Mr. Moran said Governor Guild did not mention it in his inaugural, but that he quickly communicated to the Legislature his standing on the "twelve o'clock rum bill." (Applause.)

A Matter of Heart.

Mr. Moran said his opponents claimed he was unfit, because, forsooth, he had a heart. Referring to the placing on probation of persons found guilty of petty offences and to the non-pressing of other cases, he spoke of one particular case: "I had a seventy-six-pound woman, saying that I would have been a shame to have sent her to jail. He claimed justification for his action and said the cause given that old woman was better than sending her to prison to die. He would do the same thing over again and if he did not he would despise himself, he said. (Wild applause.)

Mr. Moran was applauded when he spoke for the abolishment of capital punishment, the immunity act, the referendum and initiative, the placing of men on probation, and giving a man found guilty of crime a chance to pay the fine which to pay his fine, if he had a family and was working instead of being sent to jail.

Mr. Moran's first step here at the Waltham skating rink, where 1,200 people were present, was to denounce the Guild machine. The hall was packed to suffocation, and Mr. Moran was loudly cheered by the largest Democratic rally the Watch City has had for years.

Rushing to his auto, Mr. Moran was whirled to North Cambridge, where more people sat and stood in Odd Fellows' Hall, with John Brahan presiding.

From Audience to Audience.

At 8:40 o'clock Mr. Moran was rushed to Somerville, to be greeted by the largest political meeting ever held in that city. Philip Koen presided here and an audience of 1,200 cheered itself hoarse.

At 9:35 Mr. Moran left for Everett, where 1,200 more persons waited for him and applaud. Here the Independence League members were in great evidence. O'Connor, chairman of the Democratic committee, presided at the meeting and on his coat lapel was the Independence League button.

The 800 enthusiasts in Malden waited three hours for Mr. Moran's arrival, who landed in the hall at 10:50 and for over twenty minutes he was cheered to the echo. Presiding, he laid down to the applause of the audience the gavel used by Governor Bates, the privilege of Democracy. It was after midnight when Mr. Moran fell back into the arms of Thomas Riley, chairman of the meeting. He did not collapse. He was simply fatigued after his strenuous night's work. He rose on his feet again in a minute and left for his machine to be whirled back to Boston.

Cheers for Brown.

E. Gerry Brown, Democratic and Independence League candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, and George Fred Williams also addressed the audiences. They both received hearty applause.

Mr. Brown was moved to the echo as he renewed his attack on Governor Guild for his direct violation of the avowed principles on subsidizing campaign advertising. Mr. Brown discussed human and natural rights as compared to special privileges and the enthronement entitled by the greed and cupidity of corporations to own the government.

He took up the Overtime Bill and told the people that now as never before they had a chance to get back the lost control of their government.

ANTI-CURLEY MEN COMBINE TO TAKE CONTROL OF WARD 17

All factions in Ward 17 that have contested recently and resolutely against the Curley's domination have come together for the first time, agreeing on a ward committee headed by Thomas Kenny and Theodore A. Glynn, a municipal delegation headed by former Representative Richard W. Garrity, and for the candidacy of former Representative John F. Lauergan for the Board of Aldermen.

The slogan used by those who are opposing the Curleys is as follows: "Baseball park, no baseball park; baseball park, no baseball park; baseball park, no baseball park;

THIEF WANTED HERE, CAUGHT IN NEW YORK

Police Think Man Who Robbed Boston Jeweler Is Notorious Eddie Whalen.

WILL BE BROUGHT BACK

Believing that he has secured the capture of Eddie Whalen, one of the most notorious pennyweight and night-cap hand thieves in the country, chief Inspector Watts to-day sent Inspector Geddis to New York where a man answering the description of the wanted criminal is held for the Boston police. The man arrested in New York says that his name is Eddie Wall. He denies that he is Whalen.

Whalen, who has spent more than thirty of his fifty years of life behind the bars, is wanted in Boston for the theft of a $1000 diamond from the store of the Thomas Long company, Nos. 39 and 41 Summer street, in October.

On that date a well-dressed, smooth-looking individual dropped into the store and asked to be shown some diamonds of the finer sort. He was taken into the cage by a clerk and after looking the stones over failed to purchase. Shortly after the man's departure it was found that he had substituted a paste stone for a fine $1000 diamond. Police headquarters was notified and the clerk's description of the man furnished Chief Watts. The chief dug out of the rogue's gallery a picture of Eddie Whalen and sent it to the store where the clerk said at once that Whalen was the man who had changed the stones.

Word was sent out to the police in all of the large cities of the United States, stating of the theft and asking that the man be arrested on sight. A complete description of Whalen accompanied the circular, to Early in the day Watts heard from New York that a man answering the description of Whalen was in custody there. He will be brought back here to-day by Inspector Geddis.

Has Long Prison Record.

Whalen has several dozen of aliases, and has served more than thirty years in prisons. He made his debut in the House of Correction here on July 28, 1875, when he got a sentence of six months. On labels warrants nine months more were added to this sentence.

In September, 1879, he was sent to the House of Correction for two years. August, 1881, he got six years in the House of Correction. On March 3, 1884, operating in New York, he was sent to Sing Sing for three years. In 1890 he was sent back to the same prison for five years. In 1894 he was sent to the House of Correction in Springfield for six years. Prior to that, in 1892, he served one year in the Hudson (Mich.) prison.

On July 2, 1897, Whalen was sent to Sing Sing for four years and five months. On June 19, 1901, he was sent for three years to the penitentiary in Baltimore, at the present time an indictment for larceny is held against him in Newburyport.

ANARCHIST SHOUTS 'LIAR,' ROW IN COURT

De Pietro Forced Into Chair and Obstreperous Friends Are Hustled Into Corridor.

A the trial of Valentine De Pietro, a self-confessed Anarchist, who is charged with assault with intent to kill on two Italians on May 24 last in Paul Revere Hall, North End, before Judge Bond in the Superior Criminal court to-day, Dominick Caffrey, testifying in rebuttal, declared that the defendant, when arrested under arrest, was driven directly to the station house.

De Pietro, who was sitting in a chair near the bar rail, became greatly excited. He shook all over and jumped in his chair and then leaping to his feet, shouted:

"You're a liar! You're a liar!"

Several Anarchists were also sitting in the courtroom at the time caught the meanings of their fellowmember and they too leaped to their feet. For a time things looked as though serious trouble might follow.

The court officers rushed to De Pietro and forced him back into his chair. Others rushed to the aid of the man who were standing gesticulating and muttering, and they too had to leave the courtroom.

De Pietro's counsel, Attorney Caesar Ali, has tried to quiet his client, but it was some time before he could succeed in getting him to stop talking.

The self-confessed De Pietro congregated in the corridors of the Superior Criminal Court and made many threats and were so threatening in gesture and talk that Edward Tuttle, the assistant district attorney, summoned two other officials to help him.

A feature of the trial today was the testimony of Assistant Probation Officer Samuels, who declared that Lucy Wood Alden and Ida Post were present in court. After all of the evidence was completed Attorney General Attorney De Pietro addressed the jury in his behalf.

DOROTHY ALLEN, VINCENT CLUB BEAUTY, WEDS BROOKLINE MAN

Simplicity Keynote of Nuptials this Afternoon in Emmanuel Church.

Reception Attended Only by Relatives and Closest Friends of Couple.

At Emmanuel Church at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon Miss Dorothy Allen, the beautiful and independent member of the Vincent Club, becomes the wife of Chandler Harry of Chestnut Hill. The dark haired girl is unattended at the altar and she is given away by her father. The ceremony, which is entirely unostentatious, is performed by the Rev. Dr. Worcester, assisted by the Rev. Frederick B. Allen.

The auditorium is simply but tastily decorated with palms and ot er greenery, relieved with white chrysanthemums. After the ceremony in the church the bride and bridegroom go to the house of Mr. and Mrs. Allen, where only relatives and immediate friends are received.

Charles Sergent, Jr., is the best man and the list of ushers includes Thomas B. Gannett, Jr., Charles Jackson, Jason and Charles Mixter, Walter Scott Fitz, Dr. Semuel Robinson, Thorndike Endicott and Charles Hovey.

Miss Allen has always enjoyed a commanding position in social circles and in the Vincent Club. She has ever been delightfully independent, following her own ideas rather than the routine path set for so many young women. When she decided to take the training of a nurse in one of the Boston hospitals, her act created great surprise, but nothing would cause this decided young woman to swerve in the least from the course which she had marked out for herself.

Miss Allen is thoroughly independent of society and its ordinary limitations. She also affects dressed with simple, yet elegant, taste. While abroad with her mother the past Summer she purchased her wedding trousseau, which is regarded as the perfection of quiet elegance.

She is tall, commanding and graceful as well as thoroughly athletic. She has given much time to physical exercise, and her accomplishments are varied. Her dark brown hair and her charmingly tinted complexion distinguish her among any number of pretty women.

HARVARD FOOTBALL PLAYER IN HOSPITAL

George S. Taylor, a Harvard junior, of South Orange, N. J., who has been cried out as a quarterback on the Crimson football eleven, is in the Stillings Infirmary suffering from what may prove to be a ruptured kidney. The injury was received in football practice at the Stadium a few days ago. After the practice Taylor complained of his hurt and after a cursory examination he was sent to the infirmary for care and observation.

Friday Three-Hour Bulletin

A BARGAIN might bring you here once, but it would not fill this house as it has been filled every Friday for more than five years. Only an unbroken succession of bargains could have held such crowds so long, and we submit that the values that have done this must have been unequalled. Friday, with us, has become a day of small profits and large sales. A nimble quarter is sometimes better than a slow dollar.

MORE UNIONS CONDEMN GUILD AND DRAPER

Machinists, Metal Polishers and Carpenters Help Swell the List.

FOR MORAN AND BROWN

The Indorsement of John B. Moran for Governor and E. Gerry Brown for Lieutenant-Governor by labor unions continues to be made wherever organizations gather. Last night three more unions offered their efforts toward the election of the men favorable to labor. They are:

Lynn Lodge, No. 471, International Association of Machinists.

Metal Polishers, Platers and Buffers of Athol.

Local No. 1464, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of Attleboro.

Lynn Lodge of Machinists

The Lynn Lodge of Machinists at a meeting of about two hundred members listened to speeches denouncing Governor Guild for his attitude on the Overtime Bill and his appointment of Dana to the bench, and Lieutenant-Governor Draper for his attitude toward organized labor as exemplified in the treatment of his employes. These resolutions were passed:

"Resolved, That we, members of Lynn Lodge, No. 471, International Association of Machinists, do heartily endorse John B. Moran as candidate for Governor and E. Gerry Brown for Lieutenant-Governor, and we earnestly hope that our efforts will help to defeat the foes of labor and bring success to the men who are true friends of all labor causes and anti-injunction bills."

Athol Metal Polishers.

The Athol Metal Polishers at a largely attended meeting passed the following:

"Whereas, Eben S. Draper has proved himself an enemy of organized labor and shown hostility to the workingman in general; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we, the members of the Metal Polishers, Platers and Buffers of Athol, do protest against the re-election of said Eben S. Draper; and be it further

"Resolved, That we do all in our power to bring about the election of labor's candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, E. Gerry Brown.

Attleboro Carpenters

At Attleboro they unanimously passed these resolutions amidst much enthusiasm:

"Resolved, That we, the carpenters of Local No. 1464 of Attleboro, Mass., do heartily indorse John B. Moran as candidate for Governor and E. Gerry Brown for Lieutenant-Governor and George M. Gustin for Representative, and we earnestly hope our efforts will help to defeat the foes of labor and bring success to men who are true friends of all labor causes."

'MY FATHER AND DANA'S CHUMS,' GUILD'S EXCUSE

Fitchburg Doubter Rises in Rally and Wants to Know "Why?"

FITCHBURG, Nov. 1.—Governor Curtis Guild, accompanied by Congressman George P. Lawrence of North Adams and Charles G. Tirrell of Natick, came here last night, and after a supper at the Johnson Hotel went to City Hall and spoke to a gathering of followers and a gallery of women which comfortably filled the place.

Governor Guild had got fairly started in his address when a voice from the audience queried:

"Why did you appoint Dana?"

Governor Guild answered:

"I appointed him because his father and my father have known each other all their life, because his name was recommended by several Democrats and because he is so named man.

He then spoke of the famous Boyle case, and asked Mount Auburn if it doesn't resemble.

Fenway graft, the Finnegan bucket shop case, government regulation of telegraph and telephones, labor laws, were touched upon by the Governor. He also declared that this State has done more for labor than any other State. He spoke of Hearstism in Massachusetts, saying: "Haul down the yellow flag."

Mr. Lawrence pleaded with the crowd in behalf of Guild, saying: "Each one of you ought to be good for two votes for Guild." He next told of the honesty of Guild, and said: "He is not a creature of corporations."

A band and some red lights attracted attention as the Republican contingency marched upon the hall.

7 TO 10 YEARS FOR SINCLAIR

Dr. John Sinclair, who, at his third trial last month was convicted on the charge of having caused the death of Annie Russell of Charlestown, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Bond in the Superior Criminal Court to a term of not less than seven nor more than ten years in State Prison.

Judge Bond ordered that execution be stayed pending the action of the Supreme Court, to which the case has been taken on exceptions.

COL. DELANCEY KANE GOES INTO POLITICS

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 1.—Colonel De Lancey Kane, the millionaire whip and coaching enthusiast, is going into politics. He has consented to run for the representative council from the Fifth ward, the most important body under the new charter under which the municipal government will be organized next January.

SHOPPING YESTERDAY? IS THIS YOUR PHOTO?

If It Is You Win a Reward of $2 When You Call and Identify It.

The Original of This Photograph Will Receive a Prize of $2.

WHOSE photograph is this? The Camera Man snapped it yesterday in the heart of the busy shopping district. One of these little snapshots is printed daily.

The original receives a reward of $2 when she identifies the photograph. If she cannot call she may send a photo of herself and a check will be mailed to her address. It's just like finding money.

Watch out for the Camera Man, you can't tell when day he will get you. When he does, call and get your money. That's the whole story. Easy, isn't it?

BIG HALLOWE'EN FETE AT RINK

About 4,000 persons attended the Hallowe'en festival last evening in the Park Square skating rink. The entrance to the big auditorium presented a typical harvest scene.

A yoke of oxen, appropriately decorated, hauled a load of pretty dairy maids, exhibits of chickens and pigs, prize pumpkins and an attractive display of jack o' lanterns were arranged in a setting of straw.

A number of young men and women in country costumes, impersonating characters from the simple country maiden to the stage rube, flitted in and out among the whirling skaters on the floor. Most of the gathering filled the seats around the skating floor and added their voices to the merry chatter of the skaters.

In the headland "Cy" Sweat's band enlivened the proceedings, and shortly before midnight prizes were awarded to the wearers of the most appropriate costumes.

LABOR NEWS

LABELED PRINTING TRADES UNION COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

Seventy-five new members were admitted to the Ward 10 Republican Club, Thursday night, A. L. Leeman, secretary of the Central Wage Earners' Club officiating. The following officers were elected: President, John T. Chalk; vice-president Michael Mahar; secretary-treasurer, A. A. Barrett.

Councilman Malcolm N. Nichols was denounced for his record in the Common Council, particularly for his opposition to the order for a municipal lighting plant. Mr. Nichols is a candidate for the State General Court, and a committee was appointed to look up his labor record and report prior to election day at a special meeting.

CARPENTERS' ELECTION.

The thirty-four local carpenters' unions and the 150 or more in New England have received the official notification of the election of officers. The various nominees who have accepted and whose names will appear on the ballot are:

For president, William L. Huber, Indianapolis; A. M. Swartz, Pittsburg, Pa., and James W. Hamilton, Toronto, Can.

For first general vice-president, M. Guerin, Troy, N. Y.

For second vice-president, A. A. Quinn, Perth Amboy, N. J.; W. J. Wilson, Jacksonville, Fla.; Frank Simmons, Baltimore, Md., and George J. Richard, New York.

For general secretary, Frank Duffy, Chicago.

For general treasurer, Thomas Nelson, Indianapolis.

There are about forty candidates in the seven districts which compose the general executive board. The candidates for the district which embraces New England and New York States are: M. Watson Brown, John Breen, Jr., of New York, and John Hoaine, Buffalo, N. Y.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS.

Library Hall was crowded last night at the first of a series of entertainments and dances given by Electrical Workers' Union No. 103. The committee of arrangements consisted of Martin J. Logan, president of the Boston Central Labor Union; Walter Meigelt, Stephen Murphy, B. H. Pollinger, Joseph O'Connor, John Costello and R. H. Bradford.

RALLY IN QUINCY.

The Wage Earners' Club and Independence League will hold a rally to-morrow night in Hancock Hall, Quincy. Among the speakers will be: Alexander C. Smith, candidate for representative; B. J. Driscoll, secretary-treasurer of the State Branch, A. F. of L., and James Duncan, international vice-president of the American Federation of Labor.

LABOR NOTES.

Fifteen hundred tickets have been dispersed of by the Firemen's Union for the ambersay ball to be held at Brighton Hall, Chardonnay Number 9.

President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor has issued an appeal for the Bricklayers who have been on a national strike since August 4.

Machinists' Lodge No. 264 nominates officers to-night.

M. J. Reidy has been indorsed for the Common Council by the Wage Earners' Club of Ward 15. Mr. Reidy is a member of the International Typographical Union and of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union.

SAYS "FRIEND" ROBBED HIM

Grant Rauber, aged twenty-eight years, colored, who lives in Fortune Georgia, was arrested by Policeman Thomas J. Hickey of station 2, in Atlantic avenue, at an early hour yesterday morning, and was charged with assault and battery on James S. Young, also colored, of Liverpool, Nova Scotia. Young, who is a steward's assistant on a steamer about Rauber, it is alleged, struck Young with a bottle and two other Americus ports, and Butler and two others, who at once made themselves scarce. Rauber, Butler and Young are shipmates on the steamer Prince Arthur, plying between Boston and Yarmouth, N. S.

Upon hearing one of these places Rauber charged Young in his arms in such close embrace that they fell to the sidewalk. Rauber were exchanged, and when Young was freed he found that what was left of his roll was missing. Policeman Hickey came out in an appearance in time to capture Butler.

ACCUSE MAN OF ROBBING HIS FRIEND

Abraham Michaelson Says He Took the Money for Safe Keeping.

Abraham Michaelson of No. 11 Spring street was arraigned today in Portsmouth Peterson and Dudley of the Joy street station, charged with the larceny of $189.52 from Michael Kerchick of No. 3 Cooper street, in the dining room, Nov. 34 Crosby day street, at 1 o'clock this morning. Kerchick and a woman giving the name of Grace Condon of No. 34 several square, East Boston, were also taken into custody as witnesses.

According to the information in possession of the police, Michaelson called at Kerchick's home last night and the two men went out. They visited several saloons in the neighborhood, finally reaching the Causeway street saloon, known as the "Morgue," where they met the Condon woman.

Michaelson borrowed $5 from Miss $10 from his friend Kerchick. Kerchick became intoxicated, and Michaelson, according to the story told by him at the station, took the entire roll of money from him for safe keeping. After a conference with the Condon woman, it was decided to place Kerchick in a cab and send him home.

A cab was called, but before Kerchick could get into it, somebody in a crowd of loungers who had seen Kerchick display his money in the saloon, struck him. A scramble followed, in which Michaelson says he tried to protect his friend. Policemen Dudley and Peterson, arriving on the row, ran to the spot and arrested Michaelson, Kerchick and the woman, the rest of the crowd having scattered.

Success in the Gulf Coast Country

Every Monday and Thursday there will appear in the columns of this paper an example of what has been done in farming in the Gulf Coast Country on the Brownsville Line.

$500 Realized from One Acre of Onions.

Mr. Geo. Hoffman, of Kingsville, Texas, planted early this Spring five acres in carrots. In March, he sold his carrots to Denny & Co., of Chicago, for $5 per crate. His net returns on five acres of carrots were $320 per acre. One acre planted in onions yielded more than 20,000 pounds, for which he received 2 1-2 cents a pound. Result: $500 per acre.

Mr. Hoffman is not a myth, but a real, live, up-to-date farmer; write him at Kingsville and he will tell more about his wonderful success.

Such results may seem beyond belief, but they are facts. You might do as well in the Gulf Coast Country. It has a mild climate; tender vegetables can be raised almost every month in the year. The farmer there puts his crop on the market in Winter and early Spring, when the price is highest. By irrigation he insures himself against crop failure; rivers or artesian wells give a bountiful supply of water. Two and sometimes three crops a year are raised and twenty acres there will make as much as fifty acres in other places.

Don't you think this is better than a one-crop country where your success depends on uncertain weather with irregular rainfall? Come to the Gulf Coast Country and win success as others have done.

Now the land is cheap and you can get it on easy terms. Twenty acres will cost you about $500. The cost of clearing it is about $5 an acre. The cost of water for irrigation varies. You may want an artesian well of your own; you may get water from some river; or you may get it from your neighbor. But the cost is not great and those who have tried it have netted from the first crop, a sum which has paid all expenses, and left a good surplus.

It is not only a good place to make money, but it is also a good place for a home. The sunny, mild winters are delightful and the summers are tempered by the cool breezes from the Gulf.

Take a trip down there and see for yourself—that's the best way. Every first and third Tuesday of each month, we will sell round-trip tickets to any point in the Gulf Coast Country and return, at the following rates:

From Chicago,	$25.00
From St. Louis,	20.00
From Kansas City,	20.00
From Peoria,	22.00
From St. Paul,	27.50
From Minneapolis,	27.50

The Winter Vegetable Garden of America

These tickets will be good 30 days and they will permit you to stop over at any point.

Let me send you our books describing the wonderful crops produced in this marvelous country. Don't delay, write me to-day.

OCTOBER BREWING NOW READY

PERKINS DEMANDS FROM GUILD PROBE OF FAIRBANK SCANDAL

Do You Own a Lot? Are You Trying to Pay for a Home?

Are You Investing Your Savings in the Hope That Improved Real Estate Values Will Help Provide for Your Old Age? If So, Please Read

What does the small real estate owner want

In Roxbury?
In Forest Hills?
In Dorchester?
In Everett?
In Chelsea?
In Somerville?

What do you ALL want to make your land increase in value, and to make your lot a HOME for your family WITHIN REACH OF YOUR WORK?

You want LOW TAXES.
You want the BEST POSSIBLE rapid transit service.

How can you GET lower taxes on real estate?

By compelling the corporations to pay their share.

By compelling the men with the millions to pay their share of taxes and not take everything out of the little man struggling to keep a roof over his wife and children.

How can you get better transit facilities?

The Railroad Commission is under the Governor.

The Railroad Commissioners of Massachusetts can compel the Boston Elevated and the Boston & Northern to give you people good service.

Moran has given you his WORD OF HONOR that he will do his best to compel the Railroad Commissioners to do their duty.

In his platform he comes out flatfootedly for:

"Single headed commissions, the appointee to be removable at the will of the Governor, that corporate subserviency by officials may cease."

Do you know why the people who manage the Street Car Trust are for Guild? Because they do not want to see Moran have a chance to put in a Railroad Commission that will COMPEL them to treat you decently.

Do you know why the big tax dodgers and the big corporations in Massachusetts that actually steal millions of dollars in taxes want Guild and oppose Moran?

It is because they know that Moran is pledged to just taxation. They know that in his platform, announced some months ago and reiterated at the Independence League meeting in Tremont Temple, Saturday night, he declares unqualifiedly for:

"Taxation which shall obtain full contributions from wealth and success and bear lightly upon labor and the poor."

They know that the greatest disgrace of Massachusetts is the fact that the burden of taxes is borne by the man struggling to raise his family decently, THE MAN ON WHOM TAXATION SHOULD WEIGH MOST LIGHTLY.

If you want to get to your home and to your work quickly, vote for Moran.

He will do his best to compel the Boston Elevated and the Railroad Commission to give you decent street car service.

The Boston Elevated knows it, and that is why it wants Guild.

If you believe in fair taxation, if you think the trusts that take millions out of Massachusetts should pay their share, vote against Guild, who represents the tax-dodging corporations, the street car corporations AND EVERY ENEMY OF THE HOME AND OF YOUR PERSONAL INDIVIDUAL PROSPERITY.

Declares Fair Official Must Back Up Insinuation of 'Crookedness' Against Accuser.

Issue, He Says, Is Whether Bay State Remembers Command:

"Thou Shalt Not Steal."

James M. Perkins, who was secretary to the late Governor Walcott and an official of the league of college Republican clubs, has issued an open letter to Governor Guild concerning the charges against Hon. Wilton H. Fairbank, in which he says:

"BOSTON, Oct. 31, 1906.

"To the Hon. Curtis Guild, Jr., Governor of Massachusetts, State House, Boston:

"Dear Sir—I regret with you the necessity of discussing at this time a matter involving the integrity and fair name of the executive administration of certain State departments.

"We are confronted, however, by a condition which must be met fairly and squarely, man fashion. You know that I did my best to prevent any personal attaching itself to your administration. There came a time when my duty as a citizen and as a servant of the State conflicted with your political ambition, which you know that I, as a loyal Republican, was willing to serve so far as I in honor might. When I called your attention, as you told me I was in conscience bound to do, to the gross and flagrant malfeasance in office of Wilson H. Fairbank, and suggestion that the disclosure at this time of any criticism of his conduct in the various commissions with which he had been entrusted by the Republican Governor of the State might be prejudicial to your own personal ambitions as a candidate for re-election to the governorship, was the first intimation which I had from any of the possibility of the bearing of my strictures upon the pending campaign.

"By Sense of Duty."

"In the presence of your secretary, Mr. Guttemy, in the presence of Mr. Fairbank's two lawyers, Mr. Choate and Mr. Nash, whom he had hired to protect him in his embarrassment, I, as an official of the State of Massachusetts, declared to you that I had reason to believe that Mr. Fairbank's accounts were doctored and fraudulent. Putting it as delicately as I could, for the very reason that at this juncture of the campaign I did not desire to compromise you politically, I still told you, impelled, as any man actuated by the sense of decency and duty must have been, I believe by the responsibility of my position, that Wilson H. Fairbank had thumped upon Miss Ethel C. Rich, the stenographic clerk of the Portland commission, and procured her, by making her think that she was performing a formal, routine service, to forge the names of creditors of the State of Massachusetts to the bills which had been rendered to Fairbank, and which he desired to file and which he did file as false vouchers in order to square his account with the Commonwealth.

"On the public platform you took occasion to criticise me for what you refrained from putting my charges against Fairbank in writing at that time. In your breath you alleged that I was actuated by spite and political hate against you, Governor, how can you reconcile your inconsistent statements? If I were actuated by political spite, would I not have reduced the charges to writing? And I was certain from reducing them to writing because of my interest in the Republican party and the success of your own individual political ambition? Did you not refrain from asking me to reduce the charges to writing because of your supreme devotion to the interests of the Republican party and your natural interest in the success of your own political campaign?

"No Denial as Yet."

"Miss Ethel C. Rich, under your questioning, informed you that Mr. Fairbank had deceived her into forging vouchers. Do you deny it? As yet you have not denied it. Let me state that you will not deny it, because it is true, and you will not in this instance deny the truth. You desire to tell the truth, which is temperamental and habitual, but be fettered for time by the fact that Charles F. Choate and ex-Assistant Attorney-General Nash and Secretary Guttamy and Miss Rich and myself were present and can corroborate the fact.

"I ask you now, frankly and flatly, do you not think that you should have at least suspended Wilson H. Fairbank pending your official investigation into the grave and open charge of forgery made by me as an official of Massachusetts, made to you against him? Because the recital of fact which I gave to you, in substance, amounted to such a charge. I take it for granted that when Mr. Fairbank came into print and admitted that there probably was a deficiency for which he was accountable, and which he promises the public of Massachusetts to make good, he was not actuated by any desire to injure your prospects for re-election. I do not suppose that he consulted with you with regard to the issue of his public statement for defence, but when he as the executive member of the commission, says that if there was any crookedness I, his accuser, am responsible for it, I ask you, Governor Guild, to make him reduce his charges to writing so he be in duty bound to do so, as you in duty are bound to insist that he does, and let us proceed with a public investigation which will disclose the whole truth to the people.

"Let Investigation Be Public."

"Let the investigation be no star chamber proceeding, conducted privately by Attorney-General Malone and Mr. Fairbank's lawyers, Messrs. Choate and Nash. Let the press of Boston publish to the people of the State the evidence in detail. My books and papers, public and private, official and otherwise, of every nature and description whatsoever, are at your beck and call for the purposes of such research. Mr. Fairbank's suspicious word, 'crookedness,' which he incorporates into his interview, is a nasty word. It is not a part of my vocabulary. But I know what Mr. Fairbank means by using it. He has been caught in the act. He admits that the moneys entrusted to him are missing. He philanthropically protests that he will make good the defalcation and he said that somebody else was the wretch that did the wrong. It is the worldold excuse of the criminal.

"This matter is not an election poorhouse. Election comes on November 6. The spirit of partisanship and passion will burn itself out at the polls. Mr. Fairbank will find, my dear Governor, that this evasive and surreptitious suggestion that I am responsible for his false accounts and his withholding of trust funds is no idle preelection bluff. Massachusetts knows you. My reputation, my standing in the community, never beyond the reach of Mr. Fairbank's spleen. The controversy is beyond and above the plane to which Mr. Fairbank seeks to drag it, and to which you, Governor Guild, have allowed him, by failure to lower it. The issue is not Fairbank vs. Perkins or Guild against Moran. The issue can be summed up in a word: Has Massachusetts forgotten the commandment 'Thou shalt not steal'? I am still your friend.

(Signed) "JAMES M. PERKINS.

PREDICT HEAVY FROST TO-NIGHT

To night will probably be the coldest night so far this Fall. Last night broke the Fall records, the thermometer dropping to 34 degrees. On October 13 the mercury registered 35 degrees. The local forecaster expects the thermometer to show a temperature of about 30 degrees to night or two degrees below freezing.

At 8 a. m. to-day the temperature was 30 degrees. As the sun mounted the mercury rose some few degrees, but by late this afternoon it will fall and it has gone below the freezing point. Northfield and Burlington, Vt., were the coldest places in New England last night. The temperature there was 28 degrees.

SAY HOAR WILL NOT LIVE THROUGH DAY

WORCESTER, Nov. 1.—Congressman Rockwood Hoar is believed by his physicians to-day to be dying, and it is feared that he will not live the day out.

In view of the critical illness of Mr. Hoar, a meeting of the Republican committee of the Third Congressional District will be held this afternoon to act on the situation.

BUTTRICK-GUILD STATEMENT IS TRUE--M'DONALD

Editor Again Says Senator Told Him Governor Wanted the Overtime Bill Killed.

NOT SURPRISED BY DENIAL

Donald G. MacDonald, editor of Practical Politics, today reiterated his statement that Senator Alden G. Buttrick of Lancaster told him that Governor Guild asked him to help kill the Overtime bill.

The assertion of Mr. MacDonald was published in the BOSTON AMERICAN yesterday after Senator Butterick had been interviewed by a reporter of this newspaper about the matter. At that time the Senator refused to deny the assertion of Mr. MacDonald.

Governor Denies Story.

Governor Guild, in his speech last evening at Fitchburg, denied that he asked any Senator to vote against the Overtime bill, just as he did in his first speech of the campaign at Lawrence. Then he requested the reporters present to call Senator Buttrick on the telephone and ask him about Mr. MacDonald's statement.

When Senator Buttrick was called on the 'phone he promptly said:

"The Governor never asked me to help kill the Overtime bill."

The denial of the Senator was called to the attention of Mr. MacDonald to-day. He smiled.

MacDonald Expected Denial.

"Why, I expected that he would deny it," said Mr. MacDonald. "The story is true, nevertheless, in every detail.

"Senator Buttrick told me that the Governor asked him to help kill the bill, and the result showed that he did as he was requested."

Senator Arthur M. Taft of Worcester, who with Senator Butterick was the most intimate of the members of that body with Governor Guild, to-day refused to deny that there was an understanding between the Governor and the Senate as a body that the Overtime Bill should be killed.

Senator Taft was asked if the Governor had ever asked him personally to help kill the bill. He replied in the negative.

"Was there any understanding between the Governor and the Senate as a body that the bill would be killed?" Senator Taft was asked.

"Sufficient to the day is the evil thereof—I refuse to answer that question," was the suggestive response.

WILLIAM N. OSGOOD TO ADDRESS RALLY AT ATTLEBORO

ATTLEBORO, Nov. 1.—A rousing Independence League rally will be held here to-morrow night at which William N. Osgood of Boston, President of the League, will speak. Great interest is manifested in the rally and indications point to a big attendance.

THREE KILLED IN FIGHT OVER WOMAN

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 1.—Three bodies are in the morgue and two wounded persons in a hospital as the result of a murder here yesterday afternoon. Lauzel Rodriguez killed his wife when she returned home and found him with another woman. Rodriguez and Chuna Ramiera, the woman with him, were killed and City Detective George Harold and Jack Glover, a negro, were wounded in the fight that ensued.

OPERA HOUSE LOSS $100,000.

LEIPSIC, O., Nov. 1.—The Opera House block here was destroyed by fire last night at a loss of $100,000.

LEAGUERS NOW HOLD RALLIES ALL OVER STATE

NEW BEDFORD, Nov. 1.—Under the auspices of the Independence League a rousing rally will be held in the City Hall to-night. The principal speaker will be E. Gerry Brown, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. Mr. Brown at this place will make one of the principal addresses of the campaign.

Mr. Thomas L. Hisgen, candidate for State auditor, will follow Mr. Brown and will tell the story of his struggle against the Standard Oil Company, with facts, showing how this gigantic trust endeavored to get him out of business, how it has discriminated in the selling of oil, how it has been down heavily upon the small dealer and practiced extortion upon the consumer.

At Whitinsville To-Night.

WHITINSVILLE, Nov. 1.—There will be a rally of Independence Leaguers, Wage Earners and Democrats and Republicans who desire to vote for Moran and Brown at Harrington hall to-night.

Speeches will be made by James H. O'Neil, international trustee of the Iron Moulders Union and Henry M. Donnelly, New England organizer of the moulders.

To-Night at Dedham.

DEDHAM, Nov. 1.—A joint rally will be held here to-night under the auspices of the Independence League and the Wage Earners' club. One of the principal speakers will be Dennis D. Delcell, secretary-treasurer of the State branch of the American Federation of Labor, who will give the records of the members of the Legislature on all matters affecting the interests of organized labor. The other speakers will be David Murray of Hyde Park, candidate for Congress against John W. Weeks, and Julius T. Auerbach.

At Attleboro Friday Night.

ATTLEBORO, Nov. 1.—To-morrow night the Independence League of this town will have at their rally as principal speaker William N. Osgood, president of the Independence League. There will also be other good speakers for the occasion.

Friday Night at Athol.

ATHOL, Nov. 1.—A rally for the benefit of the people of Athol and Orange is being arranged for to-morrow night, at which the speakers will be Herbert E. Bryant of Springfield and ex-Representative John F. Sheehan of Holyoke, both well known leaders of organized labor in this State.

TOWN TO HUNT FOR OLD WOMAN

UXBRIDGE, Nov. 1.—If Miss Mary Severns, aged sixty-five, of the Scudden district, who disappeared from her home Monday, is not found by the searchers now out, the Selectmen will to-day sound a general alarm for volunteers and a thorough search for several miles will be made. When Miss Severns left her house she was without wrap or hat and merely stated that she was going out on an errand.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Costs Nothing To Try.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some ways a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

MRS. EDDY'S $15,000,000; WHERE IS IT?

Christian Scientists, It Is Said, Will Take Legal Steps to Find Out.

FEAR TIDE OF MISTRUST

That Christian Scientists are to take legal means to ascertain the financial condition of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy's estate at Concord is the assertion of the New York World to-day in a dispatch dated from this city.

In the course of a column article the World says:

"The World is in position to say positively that Boston lawyers have been consulted by fair-minded Christian Scientists who are convinced of Mrs. Eddy's collapse, and will force Calvin A. Frye and others in actual control of Mrs. Eddy to tell what has become of her great fortune, estimated by those who should know at nearly $15,000,000.

Tide of Mistrust.

"The gravity of the situation is fully realized by the executive heads of the cult, and secret conferences were held for hours at the Science headquarters in this city. For the first time in the history of the cult its very existence is menaced. Christian Scientists are beginning to doubt and the leaders are at their wits' ends to stem the tide of mistrust.

"The carefully staged interview at Concord proved only one thing, namely, the truth of The World's exposure of Mrs. Eddy's pitiable condition. This was so apparent that Alfred Farlow, head of the National Christian Science Publishing Bureau, made this remarkable statement:

"'I regard the interview of yesterday as a mistake. The reporters did not see Mrs. Eddy long enough to form an accurate idea of her condition. If they could have visited with her no hour they would have found her a remarkably well-preserved and intelligent woman for one of her years.

Only "Friends" Admitted.

"Mr. Farlow had no explanation to offer of the fact that every detail of this so-called interview was arranged by Calvin A. Frye and himself; that only "friendly" reporters were admitted; that Frye dictated the three questions to be asked, and that Mrs. Eddy collapsed at the end of fifty-five seconds, leaving two of the questions unanswered.

"Louis C. Strang, official press agent at Pleasant View, and Calvin A. Frye's trusted lieutenant, made an attempt to modify his statement: 'At 4 o'clock to-day the gates of Pleasant View were closed to the world. Mrs. Eddy will never be seen again.'

"What I meant," he says, "was that in future Mrs. Eddy would rigidly enforce her rule against newspaper interviews. Of course she will take her daily drives just as before.

"Christian Science officials refused to-day to give any information of the size and disposition of Mrs. Eddy's fortune, or of her annual revenues."

HEARST WANTS FRAUD PROBED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—To the end that those responsible for the institution of numerous false petitions in the custody of the Board of Elections be brought to justice, William Randolph Hearst yesterday addressed a letter to Judge Rosalsky, justice of the Court of General Sessions, calling attention to these gross frauds and asking that vigorous criminal action be taken against the New York Board of Elections. After a conference with District-Attorney Jerome Judge Rosalsky decided to bring the affidavits furnished by Mr. Hearst in proof of the frauds before Magistrate Whitman to-day.

In the letter Mr. Hearst expressed his firm determination to do everything in his power to secure justice to his fellow candidates who have been defrauded from places on the official ballots by the action of the Board of Elections.

WHO WANTS A NICE BABY? SUNNY BOY WANTS PARENTS

BABY BOY FOUND IN CAMBRIDGE STREET.

Eighteen Months Old---Found Wandering in Cambridge---Can Be Had by Giving Good Home.

That the pretty eighteen-months-old baby boy who was found wandering in Austin street, Cambridge, was lost is the belief of the police of both Boston and Cambridge, and every effort is being made to find his parents.

The little fellow is plump, pretty, has light brown hair and bright, sharp eyes. He has every appearance of being well born, as all of his features are refined and delicate. In the City Home, where he was taken after being consigned to the care of the police, the tender caretaker is being carefully attended until some clue to his identity is established.

He was picked up while struggling to maintain his balance by a ten-year-old boy who brought him to the police station. Thinking the child had strayed away from home or had been lost, Captain Minzey kept the infant in the guard room for several hours, where he played with the reserve policemen.

Played With Policemen.

The youngster had the time of his life playing with the big, kind-hearted "cops," many of whom have children of their own and piled the little chap. At roll-call, when the officers were standing in line, the child toddled at-ing, guiling at their trousers and looking up into the face of each one.

Several hours passed and Captain Murray finally decided that the child had been abandoned. Then he mustered one of his patrolmen and gave him the unique assignment of taking the baby to The City Home on Tannery street. He selected a married man, however, and wishing to embarrass any bachelor member of the force.

The baby is now at the City Home in charge of Mrs. Charles Goodrow, wife of the superintendent. "He's a fine baby," she said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "He hasn't cried since he's been here. His disposition is unusually sunny. How could anyone abandon such a dear child. The woman who would do such a thing must have a heart of stone."

No Marks on Clothing.

Mrs. Goodrow said that the child would be kept at the City Home for another day and then turned over to the State authorities, when he will be given away to anyone who can give him a good home.

There were no marks on the child's clothing which might give a clue to his identity. He wore a white hemstitch and ordinary white baby clothes, with black shoes and stockings. The child's vocabulary is limited to the words "papa" and "mama."

ALL SAINTS' DAY OBSERVED

All Saints' Day is being observed to-day by all the Roman Catholic churches of the archdiocese of New England. Masses and special services are held in all of the churches.

At the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Washington street solemn high mass was celebrated at 9 o'clock by the Rev. John T. Mullen, the rector. The music for the occasion was furnished by the mixed and sanctuary choirs.

To-night the rosary and special memento for the dead will constitute the services.

UNDER ARREST FOR ALLEGED POLICY SALES

George Prince Has $800 in Bills and 146 Slips in Pockets When Arrested.

MADE IN 'COUPLE OF DAYS'

George Prince, known as the "Jap," with a reputation among police promoters, was arrested to-day and released in $500 bonds on the charge of promoting and setting up a policy scheme at No. 8 Tennyson street.

When searched at the station house, 146 policy slips, three dozen envelopes, policy manifold sheets, and $800 in bills were found upon Prince.

"How long has it taken you to make this $800?" asked Captain Kane.

"Oh, a couple of days," replied Prince indifferently.

"I have tried repeatedly to make what you call a 'stick,' but cannot bring it," said Prince bitterly. "I haven't succeeded since because I could not get $10 or $15 a week for any length of time. If you can find me a job where I can make enough to support myself and wife, I will give up the policy game."

Prince is of small stature and has the appearance of a Japanese. He dresses stylishly. With his wife he has lived for some time at No. 91 Warrenton street. He has been arrested four times before on the same charge. Twice he has been sent to prison and served terms in full.

The arrest of Prince to-day, with the evidence in his possession, is considered a stroke of luck. Prince was hailed out shortly after his arrest by Chris McCafferey, a Ward 7 politician.

BALLOON DROPS MILE; MAN SAFE

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 1.—Dr. Julian P. Thomas of New York yesterday made here a daring ascension in his balloon Nirvana.

Dr. Thomas seated himself on the concentric ring and cut away the basket which had become entangled in trees. The balloon rose like a shot and traveled in a southwesterly direction to an estimated height of 5,000 feet.

When about seven miles from Augusta the valve, which had been damaged that day and had been patched with surgeons' adhesive plaster, began leaking rapidly and the aeronaut shot downward too rapidly for safety. Not having any ballast, he endeavored to lighten the ship by cutting off his shoes and heavy leather leggins, and also threw away his coat and the contents of his pockets. The descent was little checked and he plumped down in the middle of a cotton field.

The shock when he started across the field. The balloon then started across the field, dragging Dr. Thomas nearly a quarter of a mile before he could extricate himself. He was badly scratched and lacerated, but was not seriously injured.

MORAN'S AUTO BREAKS DOWN

John B. Moran's whirlwind automobile tour of five miles in North Boston last evening came near giving the candidate a long walk or a ride by trolley this morning. The automobile bearing gotten out of order in Charlestown. The chauffeur, however, was able to keep the machine plugging until Brattle street, Boston, was reached. Here the auto stopped and refused to move. Mr. Moran and his party were compelled to get out and walk to his hotel.

It was a night of misfortune for the automobiles in the campaign party. One automobile carrying a party of newspaper men broke down early in the evening and later the other newspaper party machine refused to work. Other machines were quickly pressed into use.

DROPS DEAD WHILE HUNTING WITH CHUM

FITCHBURG, Nov. 1.—Stricken with heart failure while hunting, Irving H. Bolles, aged thirty-five years, of No. 22 Linden street, Melrose Highlands, dropped dead yesterday. He was hunting with Fred W. Gibson. Bolles was in the insurance agent, working for Haven & Fish, with an office in the Old South building.

UTES RECOVER PONIES IN BRUSH WITH TROOPS

A HUNDRED BRAVES GET CAPTURED HORSES AWAY FROM CAVALRY.

SHERIDAN, Wyo., Nov. 1.—A skirmish occurred yesterday between a band of the renegade Ute Indians and a troop of the Tenth Cavalry on Bitter Creek. The troops had captured fifty Ute ponies, recently frightening five Indian herders.

As the troopers were driving away the ponies, 100 Utes, fully armed, surrounded the cavalrymen and the ponies, stampeding the ponies with crowded shots and war whoops. The Indians recovered all the ponies but five were killed by the troopers in an effort to stop the stampede.

The Indians did not fire at the soldiers. The soldiers desisted from attacking the Utes, as the reds greatly outnumbered the troopers.

Another detachment of the Tenth Cavalry, that left Sheridan Monday night, ran across a wandering band of 10 Crow Indians under command of Chief Sweet Mouth. The troopers drove the Crows back toward the Crow agency.

Still another squad of the Tenth Cavalry fell in with a band of Cheyenne Indians, who on representation that they were hunting, were allowed to go in peace.

DOG'S BARK SAVES FIVE; HOUSE BURNS

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Nov. 1.—John Dolan, his wife, two daughters and a son, were saved from burning to death last night by their dog.

Dolan was first aroused by the dog's howling and went to sleep again. The dog next jumped into the bed and seized Dolan by the hair. This thoroughly awakened Dolan and the family gained a place of safety just as the roof was falling in.

3 MEN AND 2 TOWNS FIGHT FOR TREASURE

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 1.—Three men and two towns claim the $1,500 in Mexican money found in rum kegs at New Vineyard a week ago. The law allows one-half to go to the town and the other to the person on whose land the money is dug up. New Vineyard was a part of Strong when the money was buried, two men own the land and a third asserts that an ancestor buried the money.

HAMPSHIRE OUT FOR MORAN

NORTHAMPTON, Nov. 1.—The most important conference of labor men that has ever been held in Hampshire county was that here last night, when the various unions and Wage Earners clubs of this city, Bay State, Florence, Haydenville, Leeds, South Hadley Falls and Easthampton were represented.

Every delegate was a leader in the cause of organized labor. There were nearly three hundred present. The meeting was addressed by Thomas L. Hisgen of West Springfield, Independence League and Democratic candidate for auditor, by Herbert E. Bryant of Springfield, for eight years New England organizer for the moulders' unions, ex-Representative John F. Sheehan of Holyoke, Hon. Thomas H. Bates of Boston, and others.

It was a non-partisan and non-Moran and Brown gathering. After the speech making addresses were appointed to work for the interest of the union candidates until the polls are closed on election day.

Mr. Hisgen made quite a fine impression and it was voted that every delegate should report to his union in favor of working vigorously for the promotion of his candidacy.

GARTLAND IS OPPOSED BY UNION LABOR

State Branch, A. F. of L., Condemns Aspirant to Board of Aldermen After Hearing.

ASKS FOR HIS DEFEAT

Labor has taken a stand in the aldermanic fight in the Fifth District, which comprises Wards 9 and 10, and opposes Senator J. Gartland on the labor record. The executive council of the State branch of the American Federation of Labor, after a hearing voted to endorse Isaac M. Hoddell, the nominee of the Boston Central Labor Union, and the following letter:

Gives Hearing on Charges.

"Hon. James Donovan, No. 31 Emerald street, Boston, Mass.

"Dear Mr. Donovan: The Executive Council of the State branch of the A. F. of L. gave a hearing yesterday to Senator Gartland upon charges that his official record showed him to be hostile to the interests of labor.

"After a full and fair hearing, at which the Senator was given an opportunity to explain his hostile record upon women's and minors' bill, it was unanimously voted to condemn him for his record, and to call attention that you are supporting Senator Gartland. I trust that you will not do this, friend, I ask you not to espouse the cause of Senator Gartland, but I ask you to use us to compel all friends of labor to work for his defeat.

"This letter is addressed in a spirit of friendship and I trust you will receive it in the same manner and that your political plans can be arranged so as not to conflict with your numerous friends in the labor organizations in opposing labor's enemy, Senator Gartland. Respectfully yours, ARTHUR H. HUDDELL, President C. L. U.

"Boston, October 29."

Mr. Donovan's answer follows:

"Opposed to Gartland."

"Arthur M. Hoddell, president Central Labor Union, Boston, Mass.

"Dear Mr. Hoddell: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your very friendly letter of the 29th inst. In which you ask me not to oppose organized labor in its contest to defeat Senator Gartland for alderman.

"I have been consistently opposed to Senator Gartland's candidacy, and assure you that I will do all in my power to prevent his election to the Board of Aldermen. The Democracy of Ward 9, complete as it does in the interests of wage earners, is in complete sympathy with organized labor and can rely fully upon me to prove its sympathy at the polls, which means, in my opinion, that Senator Gartland will be defeated decisively in the coming primaries.

"Thanking you for your kind expressions of confidence, I remain, yours sincerely, "JAMES DONOVAN."

Boston, October 31."

WEST DECLINES TO HEAD TECH

Professor Andrew F. West of Princeton has declined the presidency of Technology. Princeton's popular dean of her graduate school, after consideration of the position of the Massachusetts institution for thirty days, has decided to forego the honor of being the head of the greatest technical school in America.

The executive committee has his letter in hand to-day.

ROBINSON SAYS "NO LEMONS"

Charles H. S. Robinson, fat and funny, is getting some enjoyment out of his candidacy for the Senate in the Suffolk district, even if he hasn't the ghost of a chance of election. He is a Republican. He has not issued a letter to the ward committees and voters of the district in which he declares:

"If elected salary will go to Robinson's not charity."

QUESTIONED LANE ON OVERTIME BILL

At a meeting of the ward 22 Wage Earners' Club, at Odeon avenue and Centre street, Roxbury, last night, Senator Daniel D. Lane was rigidly questioned as to his attitude on the Overtime Bill by Alderman Fred J. Kneeland. About 500 attended the meeting and indorsed the candidacy of John A. Keppy, who is a member of the club, for the House of Representatives. President M. J. Bond presided.

NURSE ON WAY TO BOSTON TO FIND HERSELF FAMOUS

MISS ELIZABETH HOGLE

HUB HEROINE IN FRENCH RAILWAY WRECK.

MissElizabeth Hogle and Companions, All from City, Heroines of Railway Accident in France.

When Miss Elizabeth Hogle, a nurse, who lives at No. 12 Mt. Vernon street, arrives home from abroad sometime within the next two weeks, she will find that she is much more famous than when she went away.

Because of the work which Miss Hogle, Miss Laura Coleman and Miss Frances Munroe, also Boston nurses, did in a railway accident at Epernon, near Paris, France, they have been made the subject of a laudatory report by Ambassador McCormick.

The young women were passengers on a train that was in collision. All the nurses except Miss Coleman escaped injury, and she was not too much hurt to assist in the heroic work which their performed among those seriously hurt.

For some time after the wreck the young women were the only persons on the spot who at all understood the care of the injured. They assumed entire control of the situation and were obeyed in every detail by the trainmen.

Even after the arrival of doctors the nurses continued the good work and assisted in getting the injured aboard the relief trains.

They did not give their names. The simply announced that they were from "Boston, Mass." It was after the officials were unable to locate them that word was sent to Ambassador McCormick.

Miss Hogle sails for home on November 8. The others remain abroad for some time longer. Miss Hogle's sister is Miss Alma Hogle, matron of the Somerville Hospital.

INTERNATIONAL "JAG" BASIS OF DIVORCE SUIT

Mrs. Stewart Tells of Husband's Bibulous Achievements in Honeymoon.

IS GRANTED DECREE NISI

After giving a brief but breezy account of an international "jag," which she said her husband accumulated during their honeymoon trip to Europe in the Summer of 1901, Mrs. Florence A. Stewart, former boarding house keeper in Berwick Park, received a decree nisi in the divorce court to-day on the familiar grounds of intoxication and non-support.

On the morning of her marriage to Harry J. Stewart, present whereabouts unknown, Mrs. Stewart testified that she drew $2,000 from the bank and gave $500 of the money to her husband, with instructions to buy tickets for the honeymoon trip abroad.

Mr. Stewart bought the tickets—also drinks.

Dropped It at Poker.

The first day out at sea he borrowed $100 from the bride and went to the smoking room, where "he dropped the money at poker." The next day he borrowed "another hundred and dropped that, too," so he assured the bride, and she assured the court.

Mrs. Stewart then tightened her purse strings, but relaxed them again in Liverpool, to which port she testified her husband "drank up another hundred or so."

From Liverpool they went to Paris—and the bibulous bridegroom introduced himself to the wines of the country and had difficulties with the gendarmes, which cost the bride many francs.

Ended on Deer Island.

Their round-trip tickets called for short stops at Brussels, Geneva, Venice and Madrid, but long before they crossed the Alps Mr. Stewart had become so intoxicated with beer, whiskey, vermouth, absinthe, champagne, schnapps and other things that it was only by one of the most humiliating diplomacy on the part of the bride that she was able to get him aboard a steamer homeward bound.

Mr. Stewart's honeymoon ended on Deer Island.

FRANCE SWEPT BY BLIZZARD

PARIS, Nov. 1.—A violent storm has swept over the south of France, accompanied by heavy falls of snow on the coast and a tidal wave at Toulon which prevented Admiral Touchard's squadron from coaling.

Many small craft were torn from their anchorages and wrecked and the quays were flooded. Also suffered severely, the famous promenade des Anglais and the neighboring streets being under water a foot deep.

DANA'S BROTHER DEAD.

WARREN, O., Nov. 1.—Junius Dana, brother of the late Charles A. Dana of the New York Sun, and founder of Dana's Musical Institute of this city, is dead at Thornville, Perry county, this State, after a brief illness.

CONTRACTORS URGED TO YIELD IN SCHOOL WORK

City Hall Conference Results in Victory for Sheet Metal Workers.

GIVE ANSWER TO-MORROW

In the dispute between the sheet metal workers and the contractors on the new Charlestown High School building, which threatened to tie up work on all the school buildings being constructed in the city, it was decided by Mayor Fitzgerald and the contractors' Commission at a conference held in the Mayor's office to-day that the contractors might be right from a legal standpoint in regard to daily rate of wages. It was for the best interests of all concerned that they accede to the demands of the workmen.

The sub-contractor on the sheet metal work as well as the union representatives was represented by counsel, finally agreed to give his answer to-morrow as to whether or not he would accede to the demands of the men.

Asks to Rate of Wages.

Assistant Corporation Counsel John D. McLaughlin was on hand to advise the Mayor on the legal phases of the questions involved.

Statements were submitted in regard to the rates paid by the different firms in the city engaged in the heating, ventilating and sheet metal business, and the question was discussed at length as to whether or not $3.00 had been established as the "customary" rate of wages in this city for these classes of work. The labor unionists contended that as more than a majority of the firms were paying this wage, it was established, which contention the sub-contractor did not agree to.

Mr. McLaughlin brought out the fact that this contract was executed in March of this year, when the average wage was $3.25 a day, and that the general advance seen in these trades was made on August 1. He was of opinion that the courts would hold that the sub-contractor was right in continuing to pay the employes at the rate that existed when the contract was entered into.

Small Amount Involved.

While the Mayor was of the opinion that the contractor would be justified from a legal standpoint in insisting that the wages which he was paying be continued until his contract was completed, he felt that everything possible would be for the best interests of all concerned if he would agree to pay the established wage. Only one or two men would be affected by this increase, and in view of the fact that a very small amount was involved, the Mayor and Commissioner also felt that it would be advisable for the sub-contractor to accede to the demands.

CARNEGIE'S NEPHEW IS SHOOTING BEARS

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Nov. 1.—M. Carnegie Hunt of New York, a nephew of the great ironmaster, has proven himself a hunter of the Roosevelt class. He and Mrs. Hunt have been hunting with the aid of five big grizzlies, two of which were killed by Mrs. Hunt. The mountain lion fell before the aim of H. H. Benedict of New Haven, Ct., and W. Widmeyer, also of New Haven, dropped two of the other grizzlies. Each member of the party killed a deer.

SAMOSET ANNUAL TO-NIGHT.

The Samoset Cotton Club will hold its annual ball this evening in Bowker's Hall, Charlestown. The demand for tickets indicates that the affair will eclipse the ball held under the club's auspices last year. A concert from 8 to 9 o'clock, the Waverly orchestra, will precede the dancing.

GIRL WITH GUN CHASES THIEF FROM HOUSE

Armed With Rifle, Helen Riordan, 15 Years Old, Saves Neighbor's Property.

ROCKLAND, Nov. 1.—Fifteen-year-old Helen Riordan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Riordan of Water street, is to-day being praised from one end of town to the other for the nerve she displayed at her home late night when she heard a thief in the apartments of John G. Owens, who lives opposite in the same house, ran for her rifle and chased the would-be robber from the house.

Miss Riordan was going to her room when she heard some one moving around on the floor overhead. She knew it was no member of the Owens family, and instead of alarming her father and mother, she secured her rifle.

She then stepped out into the dark hall and walked upstairs. In the eglcom she espied a man and the same moment the intruder saw the girl. He also saw the glint of the steel barrel of the gun. Dashing past her, the thief ran, a jewel casket under his arm.

After him ran the girl. The man bolted for the dining room and then into the kitchen. There he sprang through a window, at the same time dropping the casket.

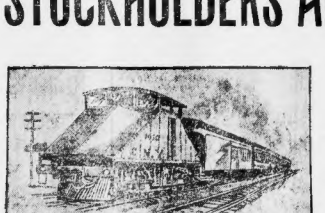
STOCKHOLDERS AND INVESTORS

NOTICE:—



The new Electric Air Line Railroad between New York and Chicago is certain to make immense fortunes for its stockholders. Those who get their names upon our books during the next three days will have reason to count themselves the most fortunate or the most sagacious investors of this generation. The present price is $26 a share, but it will advance at midnight, Nov. 3, to $27. Here is an opportunity which has seldom been equalled in our national history. The need of this railroad is obvious, and is conceded, even by those connected with the lines now in operation—it is certain to command all the business if can handle—the efficiency and practicability of its motive power are proven—surveys have been made much right of way has been secured—the work of construction is in actual progress, and when completed the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line R. R. will adequately serve the business interests of the country's largest population and commercial centres. There are 4,000,000 in one city—2,000,000 in the other—still more millions in their tributaries. These millions have no direct railroad route between them at the present time.

Do not let this opportunity for investment pass.

Partial or instalment payments may be made at the rate of 10 per cent down, 10 per cent monthly, until shares are paid for. At the present price of $26 per share, this means $2.60 per share in cash, or its equivalent, with your subscription, and $2.60 per share each month for the next nine months. No interest will be charged.

Subscriptions at the present price must be delivered either in person or by messenger at one of our offices before our closing hour, Nov. 3, or if sent by mail, must be postmarked Nov. 3, or earlier.

We would be pleased to have you call at our main office in Boston, or at the most convenient branch office, for we welcome the most exhaustive inquiry—we want you to investigate the plan and look at the proposition from every point of view before investing.

All offices open to receive subscriptions from 8:30 A. M. to 7:30 P. M.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

KAUFMAN IS VICTOR IN A SENSATIONAL FIGHT

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Sam Berger went down to defeat before Al Kaufman in the tenth round of one of the most sensational contests ever seen in a local prize ring.

The fight served to cripple a couple of popular beliefs. In the first place it proved that there is not a hair line's width of yellow in big Berger's make-up.

In the second place it showed that Al Kaufman's blacksmith's wallop is a good deal of a myth. The two Westerners put up a clean chivalrous battle. They fought like men who had all the world at stake—with the desperation of swimmers trying to reach the shore from a reef-battered ship.

The affair was replete with lightning changes, each man appearing on the point of winning more than once. Their eagerness to put each other out of business gave the bout an amateurish tinge at times and the excitement of the thing no doubt robbed each of them of considerable of their strength as the contest wore on and caused the blows they landed to be as weak as water.

Berger Was Better Boxer.

Berger loomed up as the better boxer of the two from the time that their gloves first touched. In the opening round he clearly outboxed Kaufman, reaching the face repeatedly with straight lefts.

In the second round a right clip to the jaw brought Berger to the floor, and when he arose and the two big fellows began slugging indiscriminately, the crowd jumped to its feet and cheered as only a fight crowd can.

The third round was one that Kaufman will remember probably all the days of his life. Up to this time Berger had kept his trusty right in reserve. An opening occurred during a little tilt at close quarters and Sam brought into play as pretty a right cross as ever was sped. It cracked against Kaufman's jaw and Kaufman went to the floor.

When Al rose his most sanguine friend would not have given a silver dime for his chances. He was flogged from side to side and from ropes to ropes, being knocked down no less than five times in all. He weathered the storm, however, though he remained in his stride as he made for his corner when the gong called for a halt.

In that rest it is more likely the veteran Billy Delaney whispered words of warning and advice in Al's pink ear. In any case when Kaufman toed the scratch he crouched and held his guard high. An improvement was immediately noticeable in his blocking.

Many of Berger's best meant blows bumped against the blacksmith's forearm, and between times Al tearing punches into Sam's short ribs.

It began to appear in the fifth round that Berger was growing tired. He has a telltale face, and the look upon it was the look of a man discouraged, though not by any means defeated. Kaufman, on the other hand, though his lips, nose and chin were sometimes dabbled with blood, which followed Berger's straight lefts, grinned in a waggish way, and seemed to be thoroughly satisfied with himself. And all this time Kaufman still fought cautiously. He drew away from Berger's leads occasionally and blocked Berger's body blows.

In the clinches Kaufman employed an uppercut that jarred and stung. It is an Eastern innovation, and, as I understand, is called the "loop-the-loop" punch by the Eastern ringmen. It grazes the breastbone and finds a resting place beneath the chin.

Berger avoided it a couple of times by resting his chin on Al's shoulder in the clinches, but, in the main, Al did wonderful execution with the rasping punch referred to at close quarters.

Berger Got Slight Lead.

Berger pulled himself together in the sixth round, and gained a slight lead, and then came a round which was as full of thrills as any three-minute spell of fighting the glove game has known. There was rally after rally, with a knockout imminent apparently for either man time and time again, and it was a round that showed that Kaufman's punch is not any deadlier than Berger's after all.

Truth to tell, in the opening mix-up in this exciting round Berger beat Kaufman at his own game. They stood toe to toe in mid-ring, each sending forth punches for the head and neither budging an inch. Berger's blows were cleaner and more hurtful and Kaufman stopped fighting and stepped back.

They were at it again a second later. They fought across the ring to the ropes and this time Kaufman came off with flying colors. He came right close against Sam and worked that breast-bone uppercut tilting Berger's head and causing Berger to clinch in the hopes of blanketing these distressing punches.

There were several lively mixes in this particular round and the aspect of affairs changed so frequently that the crowd became hysterical with delight and excitement.

Berger's Strength Waned.

After that Berger's strength waned perceptibly and Kaufman crowded him continuously. Berger hadn't the strength to strike two blows in succession and his plight was such, in fact, that he could not raise a hand to defend himself. He sidled along the ropes with drooping head and Kaufman kept right on top of him, striking him around the lower part of the face with both gloves.

If Fitzsimmons had been in Kaufman's place he would have settled the whole matter with one smash. It may have been that Kaufman had been a prey to eagerness. He was steady and cool, though, when under fire himself, but when it came to a chance to put in a finishing blow he did not seem to reason that one well-placed crack was worth a dozen of the little half-arm cuffs that he sent against Berger's defenceless jaw. Anyhow he did not stop to draw back his arm for anything that savored of a knock-out clout. He fumbled and tapped and appeared to be nearly as tired as was his opponent. Berger raised his head at times and put whatever strength he could into giant swings.

They were slow of movement and had bad aim, and the only thing they had to commend them was their sincerity. So far gone was poor Sam that he fell once while making one of those lunges at the blacksmith.

For a while in the ninth round Berger boxed briskly, but his condition gave out again and he was a mark for Al's body blows and upper-cuts. Once again Berger fell from exhaustion while trying to retaliate. For nearly a minute of this round he was doubled over against the ropes and Kaufman was inflicting body blows that were nearly as harmless as though the sledge wielder's gloves was paper bags filled with boiled breakfast food. It was a case of Berger being right for a knockout and Kaufman being unable to deliver the plug.

Berger was so far gone when the tenth round began that his seconds had to stand him on his feet and push him gently toward the firing line. He displayed great gameness, however. He strode wearily towards Kaufman and accepted an invitation to slug. After a few passes Berger's hands dropped heavily to his sides and his head sunk. He still faced the enemy, but was too far gone to fight back at Kaufman, and Kaufman was still at fault in not having the presence of mind to stand away and measure his man with one telling blow. He cuffed and cuffed and grew tired as he cuffed.

Berger clasped him around the waist and Referee Welch pulled him away. Berger staggered to the ropes and Kaufman, under advice from his corner, took to pelting him in the body again. The blows appeared to be harmless ones, but Berger began to sink towards the floor. Even as he slowly crumbled a damp towel was tossed in from his corner in token of defeat. The finish will go on record as a knockout, but in reality exhaustion as much as punishment contributed to Berger's collapse.

Thus ended the elimination bout in the new struggle for the world's championship left vacant by the retirement of one James Jeffries.

BOYLSTON STREET TRAP SET FOR AUTO SPEEDERS

By J. C. KERRISON.

Motorists who have occasion to drive on Boylston street want to be careful of the speed at which they travel. One-eighth of a mile on that thoroughfare has been measured, and a trap laid. This eighth of a mile is said to be from the Touraine to Hollander's. It is rather a congested district, one in which it is necessary for motorists to exercise due care and caution at all times. Yet there have been seen instances not only of fast work, but likewise of reckless driving, and it is not to be wondered that the police have placed a trap on that thoroughfare. The greatest danger of arrest is said to be at night and especially around theatre time. Then, when the street is fairly free from vehicle travel, the motors have been known to drive along at reckless pace. It has often been a wonder that some serious damage has not been done by motors on this thoroughfare and the recent action of the police department in establishing this trap meets with the approval of the majority of motorists. The dealers wonder why some similar action is not taken as regards certain portions of Columbus avenue, where irresponsible individuals in no wise connected with the trade seem to be imbued with a desire to speed. The man who has the real interests of the sport at stake neither tries speed nor opens his muffler on such thoroughfares as Boylston street and Columbus avenue.

Secretary James Fortescue of the Bay State Automobile Association spent yesterday in Worcester arranging for the transportation of the teeter board and other props to be used in the gymkhana games from that city to Newton, where the sports will be held on Saturday afternoon. The list of entries for the eight events is a large and satisfactory one.

"Colonel" P. J. Sheehan has returned from his three-weeks trip to New York and is back doing business at the same old stand, the Old Colony Light Company in the Motor Mart. The rumor that he had severed his connection with this gas tank company has proven like many a predecessor to be entirely without foundation.

E. D. L. Saunders has secured the entire New England agency for the Graygood hydraulic double-acting shock absorber, and will shortly establish his headquarters in this city.

Louis J. Sackett, who is well and popularly known in this section and who recently became identified with the Moon car as its sales manager, was in Boston for a few hours yesterday. Louis says he is just looking over the field, and will in a few days make public an interesting announcement. He left for Indianapolis last evening.

John E. Townsend of Milton, N. H., arrived in this city on Tuesday, having come over the roads in the Marmon car that he has driven something like 8,000 miles this season. Mr. Townsend is to spend several days touring in this vicinity before starting for home.

HARVARD TEAM IS IN DIRE NEED OF ENDS

Lack of good ends may be the Harvard football eleven's undoing this season, and may result in the loss of the remaining big games. Burnham and Miller were injured in the West Point contest, and it is now thought that they will not be able to get back into the game for the rest of the season.

Yesterday there was only one candidate for end, Kennard, that Coach Bill Reid considered good enough to play on the varsity team. He was put in at left end.

So dire is the need of ends that Reid has put quarterback Starr at right end, and yesterday he did good work in that position.

Orr, who it was thought would develop into a good end, injured his toe Tuesday, and is now in the infirmary, and blood poisoning is feared.

After the usual preliminary work yesterday, the Harvard varsity and second teams lined up, and the former won, 6 to 0.

TEN LATIN SCHOOL MEN DECLARED INELIGIBLE

Because ten of their players have been declared ineligible for falling below the scholarship standard, the Boston Latin football eleven, which good judges declare the best school team of the season, and one of the finest that ever represented a school on the gridiron, may have to be disbanded.

The men declared ineligible by Headmaster Fiske are:

Ryder, right end; Cleary, right tackle; Seavy, right guard; Murray, left end; Thompson, centre; Fitzpatrick, substitute end; Simmons, fullback; Hale, Quinn and Barnes, most prominent substitutes.

It is understood that the only players eligible to play in the remaining league games are Sweetser, right halfback; Keegan, left halfback; Daly, quarterback; Captain Jewett, right tackle, and a few substitutes.

Coach Maguire is in a quandary as to the future of the eleven, and from the present outlook the chances are that the annual game with English High, Thanksgiving Day morning, will have to be cancelled.

Weak, Suffering Men

Without doubt or question I cure without any interference with their daily duties all diseases of men

THINKS HELVETIA WILL PROVE A FAST ROADSTER

It was little wonder the crowd gave J. M. E. Morrill a rousing hand when he won the sixth heat and race with Helvetia at the last matinee of the Dorchester Driving Club, as not only was he one of the charter members of the club, but ever since has been closely identified in its successes.

Along when the organization was in its swaddling clothes Mr. Morrill filled the several official positions to the president's chair. Those who know say that he made a right good presiding officer, and that since vacating the position has always kept a sharp lookout for the prosperity of the society for which he had done so much.

Some years before the Dorchester Driving Club Mr. Morrill became prominently known to the horsemen of Greater Boston. It was through owning the pacer Jewett, 2:14, then king of the road and snowpath. Old-timers to-day aver that never since his day has there been a trotter or pacer owned in this section capable of speeding as fast. From New York, Providence and other big cities the best were sent to Boston when the sleighing was on to beat the black rascal, but so handily did he throw snowballs in their faces the brushes were all too one-sided.

In Helvetia, Mr. Morrill has a daughter of Bingen, 2:06¼, he anticipates will fill the shoes of his old love, though, in her case, she goes on a trot. How rapid has been her improvement since Mr. Morrill began with her last Spring is shown by the fact that at that time it was impossible for her to show a three-minute gait, while in her winning matinee of six heats she trotted one of the quarters in 36½ seconds—a 2:26 gait. Winning a six-heat contest shows, too, she is game.

GEORGE ASHLEY WILL MEET SYDNEY

George Ashley of Fall River and Fred Sydney, the chocolate wonder, are matched for fifteen rounds next Monday night at the Augusta.

Ashley's glass arm from his Cote bout months ago is back in joint and working with greased regularity. This boy, in eighty-two hard contests, has lost but two, and those against middleweights, while he stands ready to make 133 pounds at all times, and at that mark will post forfeit with the AMERICAN for matches with the best boys traveling. He claims to have bested Deshler twice, though receiving only a draw, and his friends regard him as the greatest lightweight ever turned out of the Spindle City. His trainer, the veteran Joe McNally, says no cleverer boxers grow in the United States than George Ashley and that he is better now than ever.

Fred Sydney has practically cleaned the slate of fighters of his class, and is traveling the championship route blazed by his mentor, George Dixon, at a rate that more than satisfies his friends. These lads work much alike in a scientific whirlwind style to fade a picture machine for speed and kaleidoscopic movement.

WHO WILL MANAGE THE BOSTON CLUB?

The following dispatch was received from Hearst's Chicago American office over the BOSTON AMERICAN leased wire this afternoon:

"Just had Ban Johnson on telephone. He says it is true that an old player on the Boston club will manage the team, and added that it is not Stahl. He says that's all that he can say, as it's up to the owners of the club in Boston. He suggests you may get that information from them."

At the Boston American League Club office the management announced that no information regarding the subject of a new manager would be given out until the return from abroad next month of President John I. Taylor.

CULLEN WILL MEET MURPHY IN CHELSEA

Dick Cullen, lightweight champion of Australia, will meet Tommy Murphy, of New York, at the Lincoln A. C., Chelsea, next Tuesday, instead of Matty Baldwin, of Charlestown, who severely injured his right hand while training yesterday.

ANDOVER ELEVEN WINS.

ANDOVER, Nov. 1.—Andover defeated the Brown second football team by the score of 10 to 5 on Brothers Field.

TEN RACES ON TO-MORROW

Good sport is promised at the fourth matinee of the Metropolitan Driving Club on the Charles River Speedway to-morrow afternoon. The entries are as follows:

Class A, pacing—Chief Wilkie, Louise E. and Phebon W.

Class B, trotting—Billy Ross, Binjolla, La Gazelle and Pender Maid.

Class C, pacing—Airola, Red Pepper, Nancy Grayson, Fred and Elmwood.

Class D, trotting—Tom Drew, Cervantes, Pertene and Wavelite.

Class E, pacing—Gagnaunt, Little Sidney, Tiger and Billy Mack.

Class F, trotting—Bert S., Curts, Silver Glow and Dash.

Class G, pacing—Platte, Nyphen, Pearla Baronmore, Mutineer, Outcast and Salinas.

Class H, trotting—Chazy Belle, Alclay H., Kopte, Monatine and General Lee.

Class K, pacing—Marchwood, Helen R., Major, Billy Wilkes and Early Bird, Jr.

Class L, pacing—Helen D., Nilox, Charlena, Macbeth and Coliath.

MORSE WILL PLAY FULLBACK

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 1.—Yale fears defeat at the hands of West Point Saturday. The team is rather disorganized because of the inability to get the proper men for proper places on the team. Because Roome has failed to round into form, the chances are that Captain Sammy Morse will have to play fullback for the rest of the season. Billy Bull and Al Sharpe took care of the kickers yesterday, and they are trying to develop a "booter" to take the place of Roome.

CONNELLY IN A DRAW BOUT

ROCKLAND, Me., Nov. 1.—Tom Sawyer of Rockland, a practically unknown fighter except in local circles, stood up against Bartley Connelly last night at the big rink for fifteen rounds. Referee Stuart called the decision a draw, but this was not at all pleasing to the fight fans.

In the sixth round Sawyer had Connelly down twice. Sawyer dislocated his right hand in the seventh round.

ELSIE MACK IN NEW HANDS

Devotees of the Dorchester Driving Club matinees will be surprised and disappointed to know that in the future they will miss the trotting mare Elsie Mack, 2:23¾, from the Franklin Field Speedway races.

R. C. Richardson has sold the mare to Charles Snow of Charlottetown, P. E. I., and she arrived at her new home safely the first of the week. It is the intention of Mr. Cook to use his recent purchase for a brood mare. She is only thirteen years old and should be useful as a matron for many years to come.

DARTMOUTH OFF FOR PRINCETON

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 1.—The Dartmouth football team will leave here to-day for Princeton, N. J., where they will line up against the Tigers on Saturday. Yesterday the men had the hardest practice of the season, and they showed much improvement over the form they displayed in the Williams game.

EAST BOSTON WANTS GAMES.

The East Boston basketball team desires games with colleges and fast teams in New England. Address Maurice Fitzgerald, manager, No. 20 Decatur street, East Boston, or telephone 677-5 East Boston.

Dogs and Dog Fanciers.

Ed Beasley's Boston terrier stud dog Buffer B., by the noted Cracksman, is commanding quite a lot of attention these days through the quality of puppies he is siring. Some of his get will be seen at the show next month.

* * *

T. E. L. Kemp is branching out more and more in the dog business. In the past the Carmen kennels have been exclusively devoted to St. Bernards, but Mr. Kemp has now added a few Boston terriers, with which he anticipates meeting with equally the success on the bench his Bernards have had during the year.

* * *

For real hard luck J. R. Thorndike, Beverly Farms, has certainly had his share recently. Losing Inferno was the starter. Then one of his best dogs was stolen or strayed off, to be followed by the death of Thornecroft Tipster, and winding up with himself getting an attack of typhoid fever.

* * *

Imp. Ripp d'Alfort is making the breeders of French bulldogs sit up and take notice through the superiority of his get. As a show dog he may not be a top-notcher himself, but he possesses that potent quality of transmitting the best type of his breed to his sons and daughters.

* * *

The New England Collie Club were counting on holding an exhibition next month, but trouble in getting a suitable hall has caused them to postpone the show till some time during January.

* * *

The greatest terrier show ever held in the world is talked to take place early in the year in New York. The Airdale, Boston, bull, fox, Irish, Scottish and Welsh terrier clubs are counted in combining to make the exhibition all that is said.

* * *

Mrs. F. E. Durgin of Lynn has sold to a resident of Rochester, N. Y., an Admiral Togo II. puppy, a Hooker pup to a New Bedford woman, and sent five Boston terrier puppies to California.

* * *

On account of the hilly country around Athol holding numerous foxes, the New England Fox Hunters' Club will have their annual hunt in that section in place of Bedford, as last year. This may prove a mistake, as Arthur H. Parker, owner of the Shawsheen farm, in Bedford, says the foxes are so thick this Fall that they have killed over a hundred of his chickens lately.

* * *

Frank Cauley of Charlestown has bought of Mr. Paul, South Boston, a sixteen-pound Boston terrier. He goes to the show next month.

* * *

Mrs. F. A. Dallen of this city has purchased of William Wallace, Waterbury, Ct., Chauncy Boy, Jr., a litter brother of Chauncy Girl.

* * *

In some quarters there is a prevailing idea the breeders of Boston terriers are allowing the color to grow too dark, almost solid in many instances. Six or eight years ago there were an abundance of handsome mahogany, light and red brindles to be seen.

* * *

John C. Sullivan of Charlestown has bought Lady Bell, which was second in a class of sixteen puppy bitches at the Brockton show, and believes he has made a winning addition to his kennel of Bostons.

* * *

Several of the get of Ch. Viking are to make their debut at the Boston terrier show next month, including one owned by H. M. Reed of Haverhill that is tipped to be a wonder.

* * *

William A. Smith of Cambridge has bought of William Cox the fifteen-pound Cox's Teddy. He is a happy little chap with the best of markings.

Dorothy Dix Advises the Would-Be Husband to Look to the Choice of His Wife's Mother in the Second of Her

Ten Commandments for Married Men

The Happiness of His Home Is at Stake

By Dorothy Dix

THE second commandment of the married man is this:

Thou shalt choose the kind of mother-in-law thou likes, for lo, after thou art married thy house shall be her house, and her ways thy ways.

In the majority of divorce cases neither side alleges any great and unforgivable offence against the other. It is simply a condition of friction in the household, of matrimonial bonds that have galled and chafed until things have become unendurable.

Tempers have been worn to a frazzle. Conversation has degenerated to a string of criticisms and recriminations. Bitter things have been said. The home has become a purgatory of bickering and strife and quarrels.

In these domestic cataclysms that leave broken hearts and wrecked lives in their trail, almost invariably the storm centre is the wife's mother. If you will take the trouble to read the reports of such cases you will see that in nearly every one the husband says: "We had a happy home until my mother-in-law came to live with us," or, "We got along all right until my wife's mother began to interfere."

Nor is this mere masculine prejudice against the mother-in-law. If you will look about you you will scarcely see one harmonious couple in which the wife's mother is a member of the household, or one disgruntled married pair who live by themselves.

So undeniable a fact is this that we might almost say that the way to do away with the divorce evil would be to kill off the bride's mother at the wedding.

Choose Your Mother-in-Law

AS this is impossible, and as it is equally impossible to cherish the fond hope that women will ever reach a state of grace in which they will have forbearance enough to keep their fingers out of their sons-in-law's pies, the only thing that is left for a man to do is to pick out a mother-in-law whose society he enjoys, whose housekeeping coincides with his own taste, and if whose ways in regard to bridge, clubs, the temperance question, and the higher life she does not approve.

For there is no earthly way that he can escape the lady in question. Her daughter's home, and also her daughter's husband's house and all it contains are hers, to do with as she pleases, and upset as much as she likes.

It is nothing that the poor, helpless man begs the bride, before the wife became to him as empty-handed as poor Griselda. Mother-in-law lets no such trivial incidents as this swerve her to from her purpose of making over the young people's establishment on her own lines, and running it to suit what she conceives to be for their good, irrespective of their desires.

If she happens to be a prohibition fanatic, she sets her large foot down firmly on the son-in-law having wine with his meals, and a highball for a nightcap. If she disapproves of his friends out they go. If she is achurch-goer, she chases him to the sanctuary at the point of her tongue. If she doesn't like his servants, she makes things so unpleasant for them that they give notice and leave.

As for the man's expectations of being master in his own house, he might as like a child's painted toy. He is a mere figure-head, Mother-in-law runs the shop, and he eats what she chooses for him to eat, smokes where she permits, and fulfils his humble destiny by making the money to gratify her wishes.

Naturally, since men are not angels, this state of affairs gives rise to endless quarrels. He and mother-in-law have it out, and he and wife have it out, but in the end, because there are two against one, the mother-in-law triumphs, and the man, putting on his hat, slams the door behind him with the remarks that aren't fit to print, and drifts back to his club, and his old boon companions, and in his heart, as in a shroud, lie all the sweet dead hopes of the home of which he has dreamed—the home that the mother-in-law has made impossible by her intermeddling.

Of course there are a few exceptions to this rule. There are a few women who love their daughters well enough to forego the dear delights of interfering between them and their husbands, and who are heroic enough to concede to a son-in-law some rights in his own house, but these are few it and far between, and a man has no more right to expect that he will draw one of those prizes in the matrimonial lottery than he has to suppose that he will be struck by lightning.

What "Mother Says"

THE ordinary man who marries may count on a future that will be mostly tinctured with mother-in-law, and he is foolish, indeed, if he does not select the flavor that will be most agreeable to his palate.

He need not think that he will escape it by taking his wife away, for there is no land so remote but to which occasion tickets are sold, and though he should flee to the uttermost ends of the earth, he would still find what "mother says" and "mother thinks," rising up at every turn to confront him on his own hearthstone.

The only way around this large and solid obstacle to domestic happiness is to embrace it with such fervor that it ceases to be an obstacle and becomes an annex to one's pleasures.

For there is a choice in mothers-in-law as there is in everything else in life, and it merely requires discretion in the selection. There are mothers-in-law of very respectable shade of opinion, and any fairly intelligent man ought to be able to match himself up with one.

In this lies his only safety, for unless he marries an orphan he will not escape the mother-in-law or be able to comfortably control her.

Furthermore, as the mother-in-law is, so shall the girl he marries be at forty, and this renders it absolutely indispensable that the mother-in-law should be selected with even more care than the wife.

ONLY ONE WAY TO DODGE AN UNPLEASANT MOTHER-IN-LAW

Whatever Else You Learn, Girls, You Are Not Educated Until You Learn How to Make a Pie

By Beatrice Fairfax

"AUNTIE," said my small nephew to me the other day, of housekeeping and cooking. "when I'm a big man, I'm going to marry a lady who can cook." That shows the trend of the masculine mind even at the early age of eight.

Not one man in a dozen knows or cares anything about the latest thing in fancy work, but every man knows and appreciates good cooking.

A course of plain cooking should constitute part of every girl's education. It is not necessary to know all about fancy cooking, such as jellies, ices, etc., but it is very important to know the simple rules of plain cooking.

It is astonishing how few girls know how to properly broil a steak or boil a potato. They nearly all know how to make fudge, but a constant diet of that delectable sweet would wear out the most ardent appetite.

What the average man requires is good, plain cooking, the kind that will keep him in good condition, mentally and physically.

Learn to Cook

THE brain cannot be healthy if the body is not properly nourished. Wholesome meals, at regular hours, are absolutely necessary to the working man.

Many a home is made miserable through the wife's inability to properly buy and cook a meal.

This cooking question, girls, is one that you ought to consider seriously.

It is very nice to dance and to sing and you will be glad to know how to embroider, but none of those accomplishments is as important to of young men.

The ignorant housekeeper is perforce an extravagant one. She cannot help but waste, as she knows nothing about utilizing what is left over.

Supposing you all marry young men in moderate circumstances. You would hate to think that, instead of blessings and helpmates, you would be drawbacks, wouldn't you?

But drawbacks you will be unless you know how to make their homes cosey and happy.

Home Comforts

A MAN may fall in love with blue eyes and rosy cheeks, but the love won't last unless the possessor of the said charms has also common sense and the knack of making her husband comfortable.

To come home night after night to a poorly cooked, badly served meal is enough to rob the home-coming of its joy.

Men, my dears, are creatures who set a great value on home comforts.

Give a man a well-cooked, daintily served dinner, a comfortable chair near a bright burning lamp, a newspaper and a pipe, and he is the most benign of all creatures. His wife may ask anything of him, from a theatre ticket to a fur coat.

Learn to cook, girls.

Don't be satisfied until you can broil a steak or a chicken to perfection. Put your whole heart into pie crust until you have learned to make a pie that will coax the heart out of any man. Learn to make biscuits that look like delicately browned snowflakes.

When you have accomplished all that you will be ready to graduate as the belle of caterer for life to even the most fastidious

Cold Bathing as an Aid to Health

THE application of cold to the surface of the body by means of the cold bath is attracting a great deal of value of which in the treatment of disease, as well as in the preservation of health, is being increasingly realized.

The action of a cold bath (from 50 to 60 degrees) is stimulating and tonic. It acts powerfully upon the nervous system, making the nerves more prompt in their response to the needs of the organism, and refreshing the mental faculties to a wonderful degree.

It banishes the dull and listless feeling of weariness in the whole body which even of youth is so apt to experience as first getting out of bed.

It gives tone and strengthens, also, the muscular walls of the arteries, upon the normal action of which the proper distribution of the blood throughout the body so greatly depends.

The first contact of the cold water with the skin causes a sharp contraction of the blood vessels of the skin, as shown by the pallor of the surface, but as soon as one leaves the bath the arteries dilate, the skin becomes pink, and a warm glow is felt that amply compensates one for the disagreeable shock of the first plunge.

This flushing of the surface, which brings with it a warm and a sensation of vigor and well-being, is the test which shows that the bath is doing good.

If this reaction does not occur, and one feels cold and depressed, and the skin remains of a bluish hue, it is a sign that the bath is harmful, and then one must be content with a sponge bath, followed by a brisk rub with a coarse towel.

After starting in the tub, and after consultation with a physician, it will generally be possible to work upward gradually to the shower or tub bath. Elderly people and those in a delicate condition can take a cool sponge bath while standing in warm water half way to the knees.

The decotee of cold bathing seldom suffers from colds or from rheumatism, of course, he does not violate the ordinary laws of hygiene as regards eating, sleeping and ventilation; and if he does take cold he is in condition to throw it off before it invades the bronchial tubes or lungs.

Many people, from poor circulation, which shows itself by cold feet and by fingers, are troubled by the cold nights and chilly days. In the case of one who habitually has cold feet, it is well to precede the cold bath with a cold footbath at bedtime, followed then, as always, by a brisk rubbing with a coarse towel.

Pointers Worth Knowing About the Etiquette of Letter Writing

By GEORGE BARRY BRONSON

ON looking through a pile of letters, it is an easy matter to pick out those written by the well-bred. Good breeding is revealed in the note-paper, the handwriting, the turn of the sentences and the neatness and care with which the address is transcribed on the envelope.

Many an excellent position has been lost because the letter which prefaced the necessary interview was slovenly and badly expressed, while one brief and pleasantly worded note would have paved the way to success.

White note-paper and the plainest of headings are in the best taste, and, perhaps, where one's position is known to one's friends to demand strictest economy, it is better to indulge in neither heading nor monogram.

Greatest care should be taken to spell correctly the name and address of the person to whom the letter is to be sent, and it should be signed neatly and legibly with the Christian and surname of the sender.

It need scarcely be said that an abusive note is never sent by the well-bred. To put merely the initials of Christian and surname, even to a most intimate friend, is never in good taste, nor is the fashion of signing the Christian or pet name ever to be commended; while the use of the courtesy title, as "Miss Smith," "Mrs. Jones" is not permissible.

It would scarcely seem necessary to mention such lapses from good manners as these, but actually occur sometimes among those who presumably must have had opportunities of learning their ungarity.

Cards of invitation are now sent out on all sorts of occasions where once the invitation would have been given by public notice or newspaper paragraph—to church functions, political gatherings, and festivals in connection with local charities. In such cases, the invitation must be sent with the correct form of answering them.

An invitation to a friend's house should be replied to within twenty-four hours and all others as early as possible. The reply must be addressed to the person who made the invitation, even though the recipient may be on more intimate terms with some other member of the house-hold. If the invitation is couched in the third person, the reply must be in the same person.

In all other correspondence the use of the third person is now considered out of date. Sometimes the letters R. S. V. P. are placed in the corner of the invitation. These merely mean that reply is desired. If R. S. V. P. is omitted, however, it does not release one from the obligation to reply.

Letters of business should always be short, lucid and void of extraneous matter. The filling in a business man is always valuable, and to have it taken up by wordy, rambling letters and postscripts runs in favor of the sender.

Good breeding demands at least an attempt to conform to the circumstances in which we are placed. Quickness, promptitude and reliability are as necessary to the gentlewoman in business as a recognized manner and good dress.

Economy Pointers for Housekeepers

THE following hints on household economies are the outcome of a practical housewife's experience, and if they will, if followed out, enable many another to more money is paid for it, but it goes further.

Do not have a house too large for your requirements. If you do, you increase your rent and your work.

* * *

Have your house near enough to your husband's work to enable him to come home at noon and have all meals at home. This is often impossible in the city, but other large cities, but where it is possible it will be found that the household will not fare better at less expense.

* * *

Do not eat new bread; it is wasteful and unhealthful. Eat one loaf before you need up, made into pieces, potted meats, pies or pastries; use before they get dry and hard.

* * *

Buy vegetables fresh except potatoes in Winter—these may often be bought cheaply, and put in the last thing before or by taking a quantity, and will keep.

* * *

The butter with the least amount of water in it is the most economical to buy

Fat skimmed from the water in which meats or meat has been boiled should be kept for frying or pastry. Superfluous fat from joints may be melted while sweet and kept for frying purposes. After being used, the fat left in the frying pan may be poured off and used again when required.

Buy best joints for roasting; for boiling and stewing the highest priced joints need not be bought. Much cheaper joints may be used for this purpose. Long stewing will make the toughest meat tender.

All odds and ends of meat should be used up, made into rissoles, potted meats, pies or pastries; use before they get dry and hard.

When making cake beat your eggs thoroughly, and mix in the last thing before baking. One well-beaten egg will go as far as two badly beaten ones.

THE HOUSE OF DOOM

CHAPTER X.

Important Facts

THAT night she remained at a small, quiet hotel in Fourth avenue, and at 10 o'clock next morning I called for her.

To disguise one's self as a workingman is no easy matter, on getting up I dressed myself as such and then surveyed myself in the glass. I cut a figure that was, in my eyes, ridiculous. The suit bore a stiff and fashionable cut, but was unfailing, yet I saw no way of altering it, save by pressing out the creases, and with that object I pulled them down, and then regarded me as though I had been lying in bed with my clothes on.

So when dressed in a cheap cotton shirt and a red tie, a suit of dark gray cloth and a drab cap, I at last looked the typical workingman I wished the best clothes.

The Hunt for a Home

With Budds's ready assistance I slipped out of my chambers into Madison avenue, and half an hour later arrived at the old-fashioned house where Tibble awaited me.

When she saw me she smiled merrily; and then as we were now together in the street she burst out laughing, saying:

"Why, you are getting quite my pet doll to make. Your get-up is delightful, Wilfrid. You look a real comedian. But you must wear on a little on one side—it's more genuine, and don't look so sly."

"He first thought I'd taken leave of my senses, but I've started all his suspicions."

And so we went jauntily past Fifth avenue and so to the East Side.

All this strange to her. She knew nothing of working people, and spent her time chatting with them. I could not help smiling at her demure little figure in the cheap black serge dress.

Arriving in the neighborhood where she had decided to establish herself as Mrs. William Morton, we turned down a street of quiet, old-fashioned houses in front of many of which "Furnished Rooms" were displayed, and had discovering one we ascended the steps with considerable trepidation and knocked.

"You can try them," I whispered. "You won't be recognized myself," and next second the door opened and we were face to face with a big, red-faced woman, whose agitated countenance was certainly due to the influence of a drop of alcohol.

Silent explained that we were in search of apartments, and were conducted up to the second floor and shown three dirty, ill-furnished rooms at a rental of $12, which was depressing.

Tibble looked mine and then she inquired the price.

"Of course you'd want the use of the kitchen. That's downstairs," replied the woman.

"Oh, there's no kitchen, I see," Tibble remarked, after noting the defect in a means of escape from the miserable place. "I'm afraid, then, they won't suit me. My husband is always so very particular about having a kitchen on the same floor."

Renew the Search

And then with many regrets we with drew, and found ourselves once more out upon the pavement.

House after house we visited, some very poor but clean, others dirty, neglected and malodorous.

A dozen streets we searched, but discovered no place where Tibble could possibly live. Tousled-haired women were mostly the families, evil-faced sewing creatures who drank whisky.

At last we saw a card in the parlor window of a small house lying back from the street behind a strip of smoke-dried garden. On inquiry the landlady, a strong, hard-working, middle-aged woman, took us upstairs, and there we found three empty furnished rooms with tiny kitchen all bearing the half-starved appearance.

The woman, who seemed a respectable person, told us that she had been a parlor maid and her husband was foreman in a mineral water factory in the neighborhood.

Tibble was struck with the woman's homely manner. She was from the country, and the way she spoke of her own village showed her to be a true lover of the rural districts.

I suggested, Mr. Merton, is a gentleman for on a newspaper, and is always away at nights," Tibble explained. "We've been married nearly a year. I, too, was in service—a lady's maid."

"Ah! I thought you had been," replied the landlady, whose name was Williams. "You speak so refined."

So after re-examining the rooms Tibble seated herself in the wicker arm-chair of the little parlor, and leaning back, suggested that we should engage the apartments.

With this I, of course, agreed, and having given Mrs. Williams $2 as deposit, we left, promising to take possession with our few personal belongings—that same evening.

Outside Tibble expressed herself as well pleased.

So we went to Canal street and there purchased two big travelling trunks, into which we afterward placed the parcels which we had bought at a dry goods store. Then, just before dusk, we returned to the house and moved into possession. We had ten together, prepared for us by Mrs. Williams.

"You really make a model husband, Wilfrid," she exclaimed, as I set about boiling her cup in her hand. "I suppose you'll turn up to work very early. I wonder what time compositors go to work, by the way?"

"I haven't the ghost of an idea," I declared, "but my guess is that they start at seven or eight. But," I added, "I hope you will find accommodations, and that you won't be too dull."

"Why, no," she said. "I'll keep the rooms clean and dusted, and when I'm not doing that I'll have always needlework."

"We must pretend to be very frugal, you know," I urged. "A compositor's wages are not high."

"Oh, don't! Leave that to me. You'll have to buy some more clothes. A Sunday suit, for instance, and a pair of spare shoes."

She made no mention of the affair in the Tenement Weekly, but on the contrary that she might feel lonely when I had left her she began to read the morning and evening papers, although as yet she had not looked at them.

Besides posing as William Morton I had much else to do, and many inquiries to make. I intended to lose no time in ascertaining who was the man living in Larchmont avenue, and whether he had any acquaintance with the dead unknown.

For quite an hour we were alone in the latter pretty little parlor, the blind down and the gas lit. The furniture was indeed a strange contrast to that at Bayside, yet the couple of wicker armchairs were decidedly comfortable, and the fire gave out a pleasant warmth as we sat near it.

"Ours is a curious position, Wilfrid, isn't it?" she whispered at last, looking at me with those wonderful eyes of hers.

"What would the world think if they knew the truth?"

"If they knew the truth," she said seriously, "they would pulverize you for your self-sacrifice in making a helpless woman love it is really very amusing," and Tibble laughed merrily, and together in the smart little parlor we sat and smiled.

Novel Experience

I was about to refer to the mystery of her flight, yet I hesitated. There was time for that, I thought, when she was more used to her new lodging place.

It was certainly a novel experience to pose as the husband of Tibble—the gay, merry, vivacious Tibble Burnet, who was the life and soul of the gay set in which she moved—and as we sat chatting there was a good laugh over the ludicrous situation in which we found ourselves.

"You'll have to pretend, in any case, to call me Wilfrid of some sort," she laughed.

"I suppose I ought to call you 'dear' sometimes," I remarked, humorously.

"Oh, of course," she replied, with the final word accentuated, "and I shall call you William—my husband, you know."

"And what am I to call you?"

"Why, Tibble, of course, my name. Yes, call me Molly," and she held her new-won husband's hand in her own with a little dallying laugh.

"I shall have to be very careful to keep up the fiction," I said. "These people will be sure to speak very often."

"I shall soon make friends with Mrs. Williams," she said. "I know that at once I can be circumspect enough when occasion requires it. Have you a fag? I'm a cigarette."

"A cigarette?" I cried, horrifically; "women don't smoke in this neighborhood. Whatever you do, don't smoke. I'm not here; they'll smell it at once."

"Yes," she sighed. The ideas of the people here are quite different to ours, aren't they?"

At 8 o'clock I took leave of Tibble after we had a supper of cold meat. She rather missed the dinner, but assured me that she would soon get used to dining in the middle of the day. Then, after seeing that she was quite comfortable, and that the locks on the doors were in order, I shook with her.

"Good-by, Wilfie, dear," she laughed. "Come home early, won't you?"

"Wif eyes, I replied, echoing her laugh, and then as William Morton I went out on my work.

In Great Peril.

Walking to Broadway, I called a cab and drove as far as the corner nearest my quarters, where I alighted and went on foot to my rooms.

As I entered Eric Donaville came to the door of his room and beckoned me to step into his sitting room. He had been awaiting my return.

I saw from his face that something had happened.

"What's the matter?" I gasped. "What has happened?"

He held his forefinger to his lips in indication of silence, and glanced behind me along the hall to the room whereby Budds lived, and then ushered me in the smart little room and closed the door carefully.

"Yes," he said in a low, strained voice, "something has happened, and there is something serious. I've discovered a fact that will alter everything. Over this put broken bits about an inch deep, and fill in with prepared soil.

The ordinary flower pot is right for this purpose, but a wide, flat pot is better, as it allows more room for the roots and creeping stems.

PICKLED MUSHROOMS

CUT small button mushrooms from the stalks and wash thoroughly in clear cold water, changing the water three times; then put them in a saucepan with fresh water and half them for eight or ten minutes; strain off the water and lay them in the folds of a cloth. Boil a quarter of an ounce of white pepper, the same measure of allspice, two blades of mace and a teaspoon of salt in a quart of vinegar. Put the mushrooms in a jar and when the vinegar is cold pour it over the mushrooms, allowing the spices to go in with it.

MEAL GRIDDLE CAKES

IN a bowl mix one pint of cornmeal, a level teaspoonful of salt; pour on enough boiling water to just moisten the mass; cover for fifteen minutes or an hour as suits convenience. When ready to serve add yolks of three eggs two well-beaten with a fork; then whites of eggs, beaten stiffly. Make cakes as thin as they can be baked. Use neither soda nor baking powder. If made of sweet cornmeal these cakes are delicious as a nut.

MRS. JOHN H. HATHAWAY.
Box 54, R. D. 5, Somerset.

BEST APPLE PIE

TAKE four large juicy apples; slice them thin and fill plate. After the crust is on put piece of sugar in first, then the apples, then the rest of sugar. Just before putting upper crust on take three sweetscented geranium leaves and lay on top of the sugar, then the upper crust and bake so when the pie is done you can draw out the leaves and you will get a delicious flavor the best you ever tasted.

SCALLOPED FISH

SKIN and cut into pieces a cod or haddock, lay in a deep dish; put in one tablespoon of butter, one teaspoon of pepper, one tablespoon of salt, one tablespoon of butter, cut in small pieces. Fill with milk and bake forty minutes.

MRS. C. S. SULLIVAN.
No. 75 West street, Newport, R. I.

MUTTON LOAF

MIX together two cups of finely chopped mutton, one cup of bread crumbs, one tablespoon of butter, melted, one teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon paprika, two teaspoons of capers, the beaten yolks of two eggs, and finally the stiffly beaten whites. Turn into a buttered pan, stand in hot water and bake in a quick oven. This is very nice, and is not expensive by any means.

Charles E. Russell to Business Men

Truth in One Part of the World IS TRUTH IN ANOTHER

Millions of men in the United States, AND PRACTICALLY ALL OF THE BUSINESS MEN IN THE UNITED STATES, KNOW THE NAME OF CHARLES E. RUSSELL.

He is the author of that splendid series of articles on the Beef Trust published in Everybody's Magazine before Upton Sinclair began his work.

Recently, Mr. Russell has been around the world. HE HAS JUST RETURNED.

We have been fortunate enough to secure from Mr. Russell for publication to-day the result of his observations in New Zealand, THE MOST INTERESTING COUNTRY ON EARTH TODAY.

Mr. Russell's opinion is of especial interest in the present campaign in Massachusetts.

Senator Lodge in campaign speeches at New Bedford and Wakefield and again last night at Attleboro devoted many words to an attempt to show how New Zealand's form of government hurts a country's growth.

SENATOR LODGE HAS NEVER BEEN TO NEW ZEALAND.

Charles E. Russell has made a searching study of affairs in New Zealand ON THE SPOT.

This article is especially for business men, although it will interest every class We hope that it will be read with attention, AND QUOTED WIDELY.

TO BUSINESS MEN.

By CHARLES E. RUSSELL.

I have lately returned from New Zealand. I can tell you something about that marvellous land that may have interest for you.

New Zealand is the most prosperous country in the world. And the most prosperous people in it are the RETAIL MERCHANTS and SMALL TRADESMEN. The percentage of BANKRUPTCY in New Zealand is the SMALLEST known among all nations. The RETAIL MERCHANTS are not only prosperous, but they are contented and satisfied and feel secure against the encroachment of any trust.

And the reason they are prosperous is because the workingmen are prosperous.

In New Zealand minimum wages are fixed by an arbitration court. The tendency of the court's work has been to advance wages in all kinds of employment.

At first this caused a mighty uproar. Employers in New Zealand firmly believed, as employers generally believe, that to increase wages would mean general ruin and the prostration of business.

But the arbitration court insisted upon increasing wages, and now the very men that used to oppose most vehemently the new ideas that have put New Zealand so far in advance of all other nations, these very men are now the most ardent supporters of those new ideas.

Because they have found the great truth that the prosperity of retail trade depends upon the prosperity of the workingman; that high wages mean good business and low wages mean bad business; and that not even the workingman himself has a more vital interest in a good wage scale than every retail merchant has.

This is what they have found in New Zealand, and they have found it so thoroughly that now the retail merchants of New Zealand support the new ideas. When the reform administration, opposed to trusts, graft, jobbery and aristocracy, went into power sixteen years ago it won by a small majority. At the last parliamentary election, of the seventy-five members elected the Opposition had strength to elect only fifteen.

It was the reform administration that introduced the high minimum wage, and the election figures showed what the people of New Zealand thought of the results.

But even the fifteen so-called Opposition members did not really represent an opposition to the minimum wage idea. Some were chosen on personal grounds, and some to oppose the government's land policy, and some for other reasons.

Besides prosperity and plenty New Zealand has also had peace. They have no strikes there, and no labor disturbances, and in education and general advancement no nation in the world can show in the last sixteen years a record like New Zealand's.

But in New Zealand the government has recognized the fact that the foundation of a nation's prosperity, welfare and progress is solely and always the condition of its least fortunate.

That is a new idea in government. But it has worked wonderfully well for everybody, and best of all for the men that keep small stores and have things to sell.

Little Editorials from the People

FACTS ABOUT THE DRAPER RAILROAD

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

How is it that Draper's record as a railroad magnate has been overlooked? Is it such that it would recommend him to the business men of the State?

The Grafton & Upton Railroad runs from North Grafton on the B. & A. through Grafton, West Upton, Upton and Hopedale to Milford. It is owned by the Drapers. For its rates and charges it is considered, but for nothing else. It has a rate-killed every enterprise in Upton and there is nothing along its line except one factory in West Upton and the Draper plant at Hopedale.

Ask the people why they do not try to start up some of the idle factories and the answer is: The rates are prohibitive. No factory can live here; they have tried, to Upton, six miles, it is 30 cents—five cents to turn their steam road into an electric road by day and have their freight by steam at night.

A town meeting was held and the vote was over two to one against this right and the country aroused dominated by the Drapers, and yet, in spite of the vote, the three selectmen gave by the Draper influence—a bright. Elect Samuel Thurlow hangs a spread the blight.

BROWN MAN.

Now the result. Draper's lawyer drew up the charter and saw that it killed the Draper road and bound them to nothing. They, however, promised a 10-cent fare to Milford, five miles. They have already raised it to 15 cents and talk of rising it again.

They promised a car every hour and they have never given it. The cars run old and time, and of an evening, when most needed, you may wait an hour and a half for a car.

Freight rates are worse. Merchants in Upton ship freight from Boston to Milford by the Boston & Maine, haul it five miles by wagon sooner than pay the charges. The freight on a box from Indiana to North Grafton, 600 miles, is 25 cents. The rate from Grafton to Upton, six miles, is 25 cents.

Why don't the people do something? Ask them and the answer is: "You can't fight the Drapers, they have the influence and the money; it is no good; you only hurt yourself." And so the towns and the country around dominated by the Drapers are dead, dead as door nails, killed by the Draper influence—a blight. Elect them to high office, Oh ye people, and

BROWN MAN.

FOR SALE---A SMALL BUSINESS MAN

This is the experience of many an American business man under Trust government. The red flag is out on his store and he is off hunting a job as clerk for the Trusts. If you don't believe this, ask any small cigar store owner. If you vote for Guild you vote for the Trusts that support Guild; you vote to make clerks of small, independent business men.

PREACHING VS. PRACTICE

With a Few Words About the Sincerity of a Man Who SAYS One Thing but DOES Another

In a wild pitch of hysteria, probably brought on by a sense of impending defeat, Governor Guild used these words at a recent political rally:

I am a Christian. I believe in the Almighty God. I believe in the obligations of my oath.

The AMERICAN is not aware that anybody ever challenged Mr. Guild's technical allegiance to some branch of the Christian church, or that anybody ever denied that Mr. Guild appreciates that a man who takes an oath in this Commonwealth under our constitution does so under the pains and penalties of perjury.

After the meeting was over, and away into the small hours of the morning, Governor Guild busied himself attempting to persuade the newspapers that he had made no such extraordinary declaration, but everyone in the hall heard him and the shorthand notes of the remarks were taken.

No one in this campaign has stooped to question Mr. Guild's religious opinion. Since nobody doubts that Governor Guild professes Christianity, the AMERICAN assumes that Governor Guild affects to wish that his conduct in office be judged by the standards of the Christian religion.

One of the great precepts of Christianity is that we should forgive each other's trespasses, that our own may be forgiven.

Is Governor Guild asking forgiveness for his public record, for his assassination of the Overtime Bill, for his appointment of an unfit man to administer justice in the Superior Court of this Commonwealth, for his unmanly attempt to PLACE THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE DEFEAT OF THE OVERTIME BILL UPON THE SHOULDERS OF SENATORS WHOSE OWN CONSCIENCE PROMPTED THEM TO VOTE FOR IT, but who stabbed it to death because HE, GOVERNOR GUILD, begged them to do so, lest he should be called upon to sign or veto it?

The American people forgive and forget political offenders all too quickly. If Governor Guild seeks the Christian forgiveness of the working men and women of Massachusetts, he is likely to get it even before the wise tempering of mercy with punishment requires it.

But the genius of popular government is the dismissal from office of unfaithful public servants.

We may call it punishment of the faithless servant or the protection of the people who he has unfaithfully served, it is still the correction which Mr. Guild should suffer this year and which is yet not inconsistent with Christian forgiveness.

Does he seek, by the application of Christian teachings, to justify this capital act of his administration?

To the men and women who know the conditions which the Overtime Bill seeks to relieve, by prohibiting the employment of women and children after 6 o'clock in our mills, the attempt to justify upon any precept of Christianity the defeat of the bill so humanitarian, so just, so civilizing must seem like blasphemous effrontery.

In these days, when the arts and sciences are increasing so much faster than our Christian practices, it seems little enough for a workman to ask that the law should prevent manufacturers from working the women and children in their factories at night.

It is a demoralizing, unnecessary, unhealthful, UNCHRISTIAN and uncivilized practice.

It takes a mother from the home where she belongs at a time when she is most needed.

It takes the children from the home at a period of the day when the parental instruction and influence are most beneficent.

At their books, at their innocent games or heeding the conversation of their parents in the peace and rest of the evening hours at home, are the character building moments of a child's life. The dirt and roar of machinery and the high pressure of a factory might take the child as far from the presence of the Maker as it can be taken in this life.

Who but a mother teaches the young lad the faith that is in the man? When is her religious influence most potent? When does she hear him say his prayers?

When does she instruct her daughter in the ways of a virtuous, womanly woman? When does she teach her daughter the folly of an un-Christian vanity? When does she teach her son the wickedness of a covetous ambition?

Every mother knows that her moral influence is the greatest at night. Every mother KNOWS that her children need her most at night.

To her children at night she stands in the stead of that Greatest of Christian Teachers. Every man who remembers his mother knows who planted in him the faith.

That law which would bring the mother and her children together at night is a Christian law. That act which keeps them apart is an un-Christian act.

Does Governor Guild believe that He who, when they would have pushed away the children, said "Suffer the little children to come unto Me for of such is the kingdom of Heaven," would consider the members of the Arkwright Club who forced Governor Guild to kill the bill, better Christian teachers of the children than their mothers?

A technical Christian whose conduct is barren of Christian deeds lays himself open to the charge of being an unbeliever who is a hypocrite.

A Letter From Nathan Straus

NATHAN STRAUS, the eminent New York merchant and philanthropist, head of the great dry goods house of R. H. Macy & Co., has published the following letter:

I AM going to vote for William Randolph Hearst for Governor, and advise all my friends to vote for him, because I am a Democrat, and because I believe the time has come to put a curb on those dangerous influences which are arrayed against him. I am aware that those who oppose him raise the cry of "demagogue," "breeder of discontent" and "dangerous element."

Every new idea that is honest and every new leader that is honest are attacked that way.

Every American child knows how shamefully Abraham Lincoln was attacked when his only desire was to serve his fellowmen. And we all remember the laughter and sneers and revilings aimed at Mr. Roosevelt when he was police commissioner of New York city by the very newspapers that are now reviling William Randolph Hearst.

We need in the nation and in the state to-day a practical application of the principles for which William Randolph Hearst stands—principles of honesty and independence in government.

A change is needed and it must come.

The principles that Mr. Hearst stands for must inevitably prevail in this country. If they do not come now through Mr. Hearst they must come a few years later through some other leader. It is to the interest of us all that Mr. Hearst's services should be publicly recognized at the ballot box.

I feel that I have the right to speak of Mr. Hearst and his character, for I have known him long and intimately.

I have known him to be a man of honor, honesty and sincerity. I have had business dealings with him—very extensive dealings—as have many other business men. I had, for instance, a contract with him involving large sums of money, with his word only to bind the bargain. To have abrogated that contract would have been of great financial benefit to Mr. Hearst's newspapers, and there were in it many loopholes of which a man less honorable could have taken advantage. In the code of honor among many men who oppose Mr. Hearst there is nothing to prevent the taking advantage of such loopholes.

But Mr. Hearst religiously kept his word. And from my knowledge of him he is a man who will keep his word in politics.

As a business man I do not as a rule interfere in political affairs. But in this case a man of honor and integrity is being systematically maligned, and, as I am a lover of fair play, I protest against the unfair treatment to which Mr. Hearst has been subjected.

Among the falsehoods that have been invented concerning Mr. Hearst, one peculiarly silly speaks of him as a "trust." a man inclined to practise the very evils of which he complains. One small fact can dispose of a ton of falsehoods. I know of my own knowledge that Mr. Hearst has been repeatedly urged to go into a newspaper combination which had for its object the squeezing of advertisers by the compelling of much higher advertising rates. And I know of my own knowledge that to have gone into this combination would have added greatly to Mr. Hearst's revenues. And the combination would not have been illegal. And I know that the only reply that Mr. Hearst would make to the suggestion was:

"I am against them for others, and I am against them for myself. That fact should dispose of one foolish falsehood.

When any man attacks Mr. Hearst in my presence, I ask him: "Do you know Mr. Hearst personally?"

In every case the answer is "No." I have never known a man who actually knew Mr. Hearst to express for him anything save admiration and friendship.

When a man says:

"I only know about Mr. Hearst what I read," I reply that I know Mr. Hearst intimately, in a business way and in a social way. That I have visited him at his home, and know his home life, and I say to my friends that Mr. Hearst lives in his home life as I do, except that he lives very much more modestly, and very much more inexpensively."

I have never seen a man rise faster in judgment of affairs, judgment of men, than has Mr. Hearst.

But if I did not know Mr. Hearst as I do, if I were a stranger here in New York city, I would be in his favor if only because of those influences opposed to him.

American people, I know, mean to do the right thing, and they do it when the truth is before them. They would support Mr. Hearst overwhelmingly if they knew him, and if they realized how shamefully falsehood and mud are thrown at him.

It ought not be necessary to argue in detail for a man who has devoted his energies for years unquestionably to the public welfare, but this one fact I would point out to business men and others.

Politics is the root of all evil, to politics especially.

Every man who knows Mr. Hearst intimately knows that with him money is no object whatever. "Mr. Hearst said to me in a big transaction recently, 'I would be in my grave so much about the money side of it,' and his actions prove his sincerity.

Nobody can imagine that Mr. Hearst is in politics except in the hope of adding to his reputation among his fellow citizens and increasing the number of his friends.

With his tireless energy and his genuine devotion to humanity, Mr. Hearst combines sound judgment and tact.

An instance of this is his selection of Michael Davitt, to whose memory we all pay tribute, when the dreadful public spirit shown by Mr. Hearst and his courage in attacking the biggest and most powerful men of his own party.

I shall vote for Mr. Hearst next Tuesday, a man I know to be high in integrity, a good husband and father, moral in his private life, earnestly interested in the welfare of all legitimate business men in the United States, and sincere in his efforts to protect and benefit the great masses of people who have wisely shown such confidence in him.

I have known many men, and I have had business dealings with many men, and I know of no man whose word would take more readily than that of Mr. Hearst.
